

Tamworth Borough Council
Draft Local List
May 2018

Introduction

Tamworth Borough Council have for a number of years maintained a list of buildings within the borough which are considered to be of local or regional architectural and/or historic interest. These entries on the Local List are considered to have local or regional interest and make a positive contribution to the character of the area and reinforce a sense of place because of their significance which covers both tangible and intangible elements. Entries on the local list can be in a number of forms such as residential buildings, industrial buildings, statues, monuments, parks and gardens, walls etc. It should also be noted that any buildings or sites on the local list, that the entire site will come under the local list designation, unless expressly specified, which will include the entire building (not just the front façade) and may also include outbuildings, walls, structures, and land surrounding.

When a building or site is added to the Local List, it becomes a 'non-designated heritage asset,' however it does not give any additional planning controls (unless an Article 4 Direction has been added) or need for further applications, such as with Nationally Listed Buildings which require Listed Building Consent. However, the designation of a building on the Local List requires consideration to be given within the planning determination process as to the need to consider their conservation, and look to preserve and enhance their significance.

Local Listing Process

Guidance pertaining to local listing is predominantly found with Historic England's Advice Note 7 '*Local Heritage Listing*¹' which suggests criteria which is helpful for specifying criteria for making decision regarding local and regional interest which would qualify a building or site being included on a local list. Consultation with the community, neighbouring authorities and key stakeholders was also held in May 2017 to understand whether there were any additional local criteria that was felt to be important in designating buildings and sites on the Local List.

A Local Listing Working Group was also formed with contained Council Officers, County Council Officers, Elected Members, Local Heritage Groups and Statutory Bodies in order to decide on the criteria and the entries into the local list.

How to use this report

The report is the appendix to the main report which contains a summary/description to identify the site, an assessment against the criteria and a recommendation as to whether a building or site should be included on the local list. The local list description should not be read as to contain what is significant about the building, it is purely for identification purposes only.

¹ <https://historicengland.org.uk/images-books/publications/local-heritage-listing-advice-note-7/>

Methodology

The assessment of each individual site arises from an assessment of the heritage value of each of the criterion which are further defined in the Local List guidance note. Each of the sites are assessed by a professional qualified in historic building conservation area and each element is ranked in accordance with the following criteria:

Significance	Definition	Key
High	The heritage value of the asset has a significant contribution and/or influence to Tamworth or of a Regional/ National Scale	Red
Medium	The heritage value of the asset has a strong contribution and influence at a scale generally limited to the Tamworth borough	Yellow
Low	The heritage value of the asset makes a contribution and influence at a scale limited to the Tamworth borough	Green
Neutral	The heritage value makes a contribution and influence on a scale of a smaller local area within the borough or has had a neutral contribution to the heritage value of the area	Blue
Negative	The heritage value has been eroded by unsympathetic materials, alterations, loss of historic fabric	Purple
N/a	Not applicable	Black

After each of the individual criterion are scored in accordance with the above criterion, an assessment is made to give the site an 'overall significance.' The 'overall significance' is a subjective consideration of the results of all of the individual criterion with each of the criterion given equal weight in the overall assessment. Any site scoring 'high' or 'medium' is recommended to be added or retained onto the local list. Any site scoring 'low,' 'neutral' or 'negative' is not recommended to be added or retained on the local list.

Reference: 001
Address: 1-3 The Green, Amington, B77 4AD
Description: 18 th Century, 2 storeys, originally a single farmhouse, now subdivided into 3 dwellings. Building has L-Shaped floorplan with main façade fronting The Green, with painted render and plain slate roofs. Component facing Levett Road is 5 bays wide bays wide with 3 late 20 th Century dormer windows, and canted bay window. No.2 forms a side gable with late 20 th Century garage in front.
Original/Current Use: Farmhouse/ converted to 3 dwellings

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Although subdivided, the 3 buildings formed a farmhouse, one of the very few examples in Amington and the wider borough.
Aesthetic interest		The building retains much of its original form and appearance, although has become detached from the great Amington House estate. The building is constructed of local vernacular and design.
Completeness		The buildings have undergone a number of alterations such as subdivision, dormer windows, however much of the external historic fabric is intact or with sympathetic alterations undertaken. The building can still be read as a farmhouse.
Group value		The building has high group value with its association with Amington House and the Green, and is read as one of the more historic buildings fronting the church and the green.
Archaeological interest		The building represents an early building of Amington and its layout is evidence of how this particular region was settled, created and farmed.
Archival interest		The current level of information pertaining to the building is quite low and would be enhanced by further research.
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has some presence overlooking the green
Social and communal value		Minimal documentation exists regarding the social and communal value, however there is association with the social and communal relationship to the origins of Amington and its associations with Amington House and the Green.
Conclusion: Although subdivided into three dwellings, the farmhouse is still easily identifiable and has strong linkages and associations with Amington House and The Green, despite a road now intersecting both properties. There have been some alterations to the properties, however remain generally sympathetic. The Green is a special area of Tamworth Borough with its status recognised as a conservation area. Unfortunately there is little information to deliver further archival and social/communal value, however the buildings forms an important part of our understanding of how Amington and Tamworth was developed over the centuries. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 002
Address: 10 The Green, Amington, B77 4AD
Description: Mid - late 19 th Century semi-detached, red brick, painted white with slate roof, 2 storeys, 3 bays wide. Modern top opening mock sash windows at each level in original openings with splayed reveals and arched heads with stone keystones. Later central porch to front, and porch and later 2 dormer windows to the rear. Blue brick string course at window head level, central raised brick stringcourse. Two chimneys, one shared.
Original/Current Use: Residential

Rear of property shown

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		This pair of semi-detached dwellings is unique to Amington, and less so for the borough as a whole.
Aesthetic interest		The dwelling which is part of an identical pair is an elegantly designed gentleman's villa which overlooks the green with a large front garden to take full advantage of the countryside setting.
Completeness		The dwelling is largely intact, although there have been extensions to the rear, the dwelling contains sympathetic detailing which makes a fine example of a mid 19 th Century pair of dwellings.
Group value		The dwelling has group value for its contribution to the dwellings which were constructed around to overlook the green and which make up the conservation area.
Archaeological interest		The building represents a later building stage of the green where more affluent dwellings were constructed to overlook the green. The dwelling is evidence of how this particular region was settled, as well as being able to reveal any information regarding the village pound which is located nearby.
Archival interest		The current level of information pertaining to the building is quite low and would be enhanced by further research.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any associations of the site to important events or people.
Designed landscape Interest		n/a
Landmark status		The building is not considered to have landmark status
Social and communal value		There is a direct association with the green, the neighbouring dwelling and those dwellings surrounding the green, and is a contributor to the significance of the conservation area.
Conclusion: No. 10 The Green is a fine example of a mid 19th Century semi-detached dwelling which appears to have been constructed as a gentleman's villa overlooking The Green with its large rear garden. The dwelling is largely intact and still retains the original design intention with a large front garden which provides the setting for the dwelling. Given its close proximity to the Pound, there may be further archaeological interest in the garden area with relation to this. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:

Reference: 003
Address: 12 The Green, Amington, B77 4AD
Description: Mid - late 19 th Century, semi-detached, red brick with slate roof. 2 storeys, 3 bays wide with 2 sash windows at each level in splayed reveals with arched heads formed in brick with stone keystone. Tiled roof with 2 chimneys, one shared.
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		This pair of semi-detached dwellings is unique to Amington, and less so for the borough as a whole.
Aesthetic interest		The dwelling which is part of an identical pair is an elegantly designed gentleman's villa which overlooks the green with a large front garden to take full advantage of the countryside setting.
Completeness		The dwelling is largely intact, although there have been extensions to the rear, the dwelling is relatively intact and contains sympathetic detailing which makes a fine example of a mid 19 th Century pair of dwellings.
Group value		The dwelling has group value for its contribution to the dwellings which were constructed around to overlook the green and which make up the conservation area.
Archaeological interest		The building represents a later building stage of the green where more affluent dwellings were constructed to overlook the green. The dwelling is evidence of how this particular region was settled, as well as being able to reveal any information regarding the pound which is located adjacent to the site.
Archival interest		The current level of information pertaining to the building is quite low and would be enhanced by further research.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any associations of the site to important events or people.
Designed landscape interest		n/a
Landmark status		The building is not considered to have landmark status
Social and communal value		There is a direct association with the green, the neighbouring dwelling and those dwellings surrounding the green, and is a contributor to the significance of the conservation area.
Conclusion: No. 12 The Green is a fine example of a mid 19th Century semi-detached dwelling which appears to have been constructed as a gentleman's villa overlooking The Green with its large rear garden. The dwelling is largely intact and still retains the original design intention with a large front garden which provides the setting for the dwelling. Given its close proximity to the Pound, there may be further archaeological interest in the garden area with relation to this. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:

Reference: 004
Address: The former Cottage Hospital, Hospital Street
Description: 1880, red brick, pitched slate roof, original form subsumed into later additions of 1889 and 1924. The 1880 block is relatively plain, of red brick with blue brick sill band, brick lintels and timber sashes. 1889 Hutton wing extension to the east, which has stone lintels and sill band and heavy round arched stone architrave to the entrance and hipped rooved tower-like bay to the corner. 1924 extension is neo-classical in style with stone entablature, pilasters and three bulls-eye windows and large arched entrances to ground level.
Original/Current Use: Hospital/ Sheltered Residential Accommodation
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The Hospital is Tamworth's first purpose built hospital building and is unique within Tamworth.
Aesthetic interest		Although the 1880 component is relatively plain, it exemplifies the utilitarian nature of a hospital building. The extension in 1924 is much more ornate and together have high aesthetic value of a building style for Tamworth.
Completeness		Although the external facades are largely intact, the internal spaces have been reconfigured in order to be converted into apartments.
Group value		N/a
Archaeological interest		The site lies on the course of Offa's Tamworth Dyke, an Anglo-Saxon fortification which was constructed to protect Tamworth from hostile attackers in the 8th-10th centuries.
Archival interest		There is already a great deal of information regarding the hospital and its medieval site. There is also interest in the relationship to William MacGregor.
Historical Association		The building is associated with William MacGregor a local philanthropist who lived here and was vicar of Tamworth 1878-1887. Macgregor undertook many activities to aid the poor and founded the first Hospital of Tamworth, and was asked to help found the Tamworth Co-op Society and became treasurer in 1886. Macgregor also created the first free library in Tamworth, and was associated with the construction of churches at Glascote and Hopwas.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has some landmark status at this prominent junction into Tamworth.
Social and communal value		As the first and main Hospital for Tamworth, the building features in the collective memories and is important for its contribution in bring better health to society during outbreaks of Cholera and Typhoid during the poor sanitation of Victorian Tamworth to the assistance that the building brought during the World Wars. Today the building provides sheltered accommodation.
Conclusion: The Cottage hospital is very significant for Tamworth and the surrounds, having a crucial part to play in the delivery of better health to residents of Tamworth. It also played a part in the delivery of health services during both World Wars and has archaeological interest, being situated on a medieval fortification. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 005
Address: The Leys House, Barbara Street, B79 7EJ
Description: Early - mid 19 th century, square plan detached red brick house with slate roof and brick chimneys. Part of larger Leys Estate, now separated. Two storeys with windows in original openings with stone sills and lintels.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The Leys House was originally a large country house with extensive grounds, which has now been separated. This type of country house is quite rare for the Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The building has an elegant design of a larger country house
Completeness		The building is intact, however some substantial vegetation to the rear is affecting the historic fabric.
Group value		N/a
Archaeological interest		The site may possess further information and buried remains relating to when the dwelling was part of a much larger estate.
Archival interest		There is already a great deal of information regarding the Leys and its medieval site which is quite important for the people of Tamworth and its role in the development of the area.
Historical Association		There is high significance in the association of The Leys in this area which was once known after this grand estate. Unfortunately much of the estate has now been built upon, however the house still stands as a link to the past and development of Tamworth.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have landmark status, being a focal point within the conservation area, albeit the reduction of grounds have eroded this status.
Social and communal value		The area was historically known as The Leys as a result of this dwelling and its estate. The building is the last remnant of that estate, and would contain social and communal value in the collective memories of those in the local community, some of which may have relatives and ancestors who may have worked on the site of attended events. Although much of the grounds are no longer part of the estate, the building is the last remaining remnant of this time.
Conclusion: The Leys House is an important building in the development of Tamworth, from the origins as a large country house and estate, to the subdivision and development of land around the Leys Building, and which the area was named The Leys, and is still referred to as such. Despite having some condition problems, the building retains much of its historic fabric and is an important component of Tamworth's history and development. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:

Reference: 006
Address: The headmasters house, Moorgate Primary School, Barbara Street, B79 7EJ
Description: Late 19 th century, contemporary with the school. Two storey building, red brick, with projecting front gabled, red clay tiled roof with two large chimney stacks, original multi-paned timber casement windows.
Original/Current Use: Headmasters House/ Vacant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The headmasters house is not particularly unique as there are examples of other board schools in the area which such buildings.
Aesthetic interest		The building is of good design which is quite utilitarian, however is purposely designed to be subservient to the main school building.
Completeness		The building is relatively intact and maintains much of its historic detailing. The vacancy of the building however is causing harm to the historic fabric with water ingress, etc.
Group value		The school has high group value for its association with the Moorgate school and school office.
Archaeological interest		The site lies opposite the course of Offa's Tamworth Dyke, an Anglo-Saxon fortification which was constructed to protect Tamworth from hostile attackers in the 8th-10th centuries.
Archival interest		The building has some archival interest in the association with the school buildings and its role as an education provider.
Historical Association		The building has historic associations with the Moorgate School, and the alumni who attended the school. The school is a Board School and is also representative of a time at the turn of the 20 th Century when education was being placed at the forefront of society, after the Victorian age.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have presence in the street scene, being part of the collective of public school buildings which are a focal point within the conservation area
Social and communal value		The building has strong linkages to residents and their ancestors of whom went to the school. It is also important as it demonstrates how Tamworth was developed, particularly at the end of the Victorian era when there was a greater emphasis on health and education.
Conclusion: The head masters house is largely intact, however is suffering damage to historic fabric as a result of its unoccupied state. The building has a strong association with the other school buildings on the site and represents a time when Tamworth with the construction of Board Schools and the development of better health and education services. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference:007
Address: School office, Moorgate Primary School, Barbara Street, B79 7EJ
Description: Late 19 th Century, contemporary with school. Single-storey with a forward projecting hexagonal bay and red clay tiled roof and smaller chimney stack.
Original/Current Use: Office/ Vacant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The school office is not particularly unique as there are examples of other board schools in the area.
Aesthetic interest		The building is of good design which is quite utilitarian and is purposely designed as single storey to be subservient to the main school building and the headmaster's house.
Completeness		The building is relatively intact and maintains much of its historic detailing. The vacancy of the building however is causing harm to the historic fabric with water ingress, etc.
Group value		The school has high group value for its association with the Moorgate school and the headmaster's house.
Archaeological interest		The site lies opposite the course of Offa's Tamworth Dyke, an Anglo-Saxon fortification which was constructed to protect Tamworth from hostile attackers in the 8th-10th centuries.
Archival interest		The building has some archival interest in the association with the school buildings and its role as an education provider.
Historical Association		The building has historic associations with the Moorgate School, and the alumni who attended the school. The school is a Board School and is also representative of a time at the turn of the 20th Century when education was being placed at the forefront of society, after the Victorian age.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have street presence, being part of the collective of public school buildings which are a focal point within the conservation area
Social and communal value		The building has strong linkages to residents and their ancestors of whom went to the school. It is also important as it demonstrates how Tamworth was developed, particularly at the end of the Victorian era when there was a greater emphasis on health and education.
Conclusion: The school office is almost intact, however is suffering damage to historic fabric as a result of its unoccupied state. The building has a strong association with the other school buildings on the site and represents a time when Tamworth with the construction of Board Schools and the development of better health and education services. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation	✓

Reference: 008
Address: Moorgate Junior School, Barbara Street, B79 7EJ
Description: Late 19 th Century, school of red brick with red tiles main body has pitch fronting the street with central cupola, two large forward projecting gables with arched timber sash windows and stone sills.
Original/Current Use: School/Vacant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The school building is not particularly unique as there are examples of other board schools in the area which were constructed.
Aesthetic interest		The building is of good design which features the main hall to the centre, steep pitched roof and central cupola. The design of the building to the centre of the site has deliberately more massing than the surrounding buildings and acts as a focal point to the surrounding area.
Completeness		The building is relatively intact and maintains much of its historic detailing. The vacancy of the building however is causing harm to the historic fabric with water ingress, etc.
Group value		The school has high group value for its association with the principals and caretakers residence.
Archaeological Interest		The site lies opposite the course of Offa's Tamworth Dyke, an Anglo-Saxon fortification which was constructed to protect Tamworth from hostile attackers in the 8th-10th centuries.
Archival interest		The building has some archival interest in the association with the other school buildings and its role as an education provider.
Historical Association		The building has historic associations with the group of buildings which make up Moorgate School, and the alumni who attended the school. The school is a Board School and is also representative of a time at the turn of the 20th Century when education was being placed at the forefront of society, after the Victorian age.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have landmark status, being the main component of the collective of public school buildings which are a focal point within the conservation area
Social and communal value		The building has strong linkages to residents and their ancestors of whom went to the school. It is also important as it demonstrates how Tamworth was developed, particularly at the end of the Victorian era when there was a greater emphasis on health and education.
Conclusion: The school building acts as the main focal point and is an integral component of the significance of the conservation area. The building is almost intact and represents a good example of Board School vernacular. The building is in need of a tenant and routine maintenance. The building has a strong association with the other school buildings on the site and represents a time when Tamworth with the construction of Board Schools and the development of better health and education services. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: ✓

Reference: 009
Address: Cherry Orchard House, Hospital Street, B79 7EF
Description: Late 19 th century, red brick 2 storeys with double gables to front elevation. Right component with gable added early 20 th Century with projecting rectangular bay to both floors. Original openings with some sashes. String course above windows with moulded stone lintels. Modern additions and alterations with change from vicarage to offices. Perimeter brick wall with brick piers, triangular coping, timber gate.
Original/Current Use: Vicarage, NHS Clinic – no use currently

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is not particularly rare, however is quite unique in this particular location being the Vicarage for the St. Editha's Church.
Aesthetic interest		The building has good detailing and design and maintains many of its original features and detailing, along with its position in the street scene with a setback and good quality perimeter walls.
Completeness		The building is relatively complete and maintains much of its historic design, materials and historic features.
Group value		Limited group value as the site has become detached from the church
Archaeological interest		The site lies opposite the course of Offa's Tamworth Dyke, an Anglo-Saxon fortification which was constructed to protect Tamworth from hostile attackers in the 8th-10th centuries.
Archival interest		There is high archival interest given the relationship with St. Editha's Church, a Grade I listed building, as well as its later life as part of the NHS services.
Historical Association		There will be historic association with existing vicars of St. Editha's Church who used the building as a residence.
Designed landscape interest		n/a
Landmark status		The size of the building, site and compounded by the setback enables the building to have a prominence within the street scene.
Social and communal value		Although the social and communal value today is limited, the building and the site have played a strong role and association with nearby faith related uses.
Conclusion: Although now detached, the building once formed the Vicarage to St. Editha's Church, and as such there is high heritage value in this relationship. The building is not particularly rare or unique in its construction, however does have a presence in the street scene being set back from the road with matching brick wall and large gate piers. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:

Reference: 010
Address: 1 Aldergate, B79 7DJ
Description: Circa 1930's, White Lion public house, 2 nd public house on site, red brick with blue brick plinth, slate roof, chevroned corner façade with prominent chimney breast, stone fenestration surrounds with timber windows.
Original/Current Use: Public House

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The public house is the second public house on the site, showing the redevelopment and renewal of the public house which has adopted an arts and crafts styling of the time.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The public house lies on a very prominent location and acts as a landmark building which contains good styling and detailing.
Completeness	Yellow	The public house is relatively complete and contains much of its original detailing.
Group value	Yellow	The public house building has group value with the cooperative building opposite and Victorian terraces acting as a gateway site to the historic core of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is unlikely to be archaeological interest in this site
Archival interest	Yellow	There will be some archival interest in the site given that elements of the original core of the public house on site may still be evident and further research may discover further social and communal value.
Historical Association	Green	The building does not appear to be associated with any important events or people.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Red	The building has high landmark status being situated at a major junction in Tamworth.
Social and communal value	Red	As a second reincarnation of a public house on the site, the site illustrates the rise of public houses in the early 20 th Century with the rebuilding of the site. The site and the building also have strong links as a meeting place for over 100 years which has high social and communal value.
Conclusion: Public houses have high value within the community given that they are a place to meet for the community, and which has occurred on this site for over 100 years. The White Lion Public House was reconstructed in the 1930's, and although little remains of the previous building, the rebuilding is evident of the popularity of this particular pub which has adopted the styling of the 1930's. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:

Reference: 011
Address: Aldergate Methodist Church, B79 7DJ
Description: Circa 1900, Gothic revival style, red brick with slate roof, blue brick plinth. Sides with lancet arched windows between brick buttresses and decorative brick eaves. Front façade has stone dressings and present gable ends with large lancet arched windows to the street.
Original/Current Use: Place of Worship

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building style is not particularly unique, however does represent the introduction of non-conformist religions to Tamworth at the turn of the 20 th Century which saw a number of chapels built along this section of Aldergate, with this church being a larger construction of a previous Methodist church located where the drill hall is currently.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building represents good quality design and construction, with one of the earlier examples in Tamworth of a more basilica type church design from the traditional crucifix designs of CoE churches.
Completeness	Red	The church is relatively complete with alterations being sympathetic to the architectural integrity of the building
Group value	Red	There is group value to the collection of churches along this short section of street, such as the congregational chapel and Roman Catholic chapel
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest	Red	The site has high archival interest in its ability to tell the story of the Methodist religion arriving in Tamworth. This building is the second building of a larger church which shows the rising of the Methodist religion amongst other non-conformist religions along this street.
Historical Association	Red	There is historic association with the development of Methodist religion in Tamworth, as well as the association with non-conformist chapels along this section of Aldergate.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building does have some presence in the street scene due to its massing and scale
Social and communal value	Red	The church has high value within the community for those who have worshipped, been married, or lost family and friends. As a meeting place the site is important to the collective memories of people and groups which have utilised the building.
Conclusion: The building is a second phase of development, with the original Methodist church being located where the Drill Hall is currently along Aldergate. This is important as it demonstrates the increasing favour in which non-conformist religions were having at the time and their development within Tamworth. Although the building is not particularly unique, it is well constructed and does have street presence as well as group value representing a number of non-conformist churches built along this section of Aldergate. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:

Reference: 012
Address: Former Congregational Chapel, Aldergate, B79 7DL
Description: Late 19 th century, with early 20 th Century single storey side extension. Red brick with stone fenestration surrounds, gable end with large arched windows to the street.
Original/Current Use: Place of worship/ Restaurant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building style is not particularly unique or ornate, however does represent the introduction of non-conformist religion to Tamworth which was occurring during the later 19 th Century and early 20 th Century. Tamworth saw a number of chapels built along this section of Aldergate.
Aesthetic interest	Green	Although quite a simple and plain design, the building represents good quality construction, with one of the earlier examples in Tamworth of a more basilica type church design from the traditional crucifix designs of CoE churches.
Completeness	Yellow	The church is relatively complete with alterations being sympathetic to the architectural integrity of the building
Group value	Red	There is group value to the collection of churches along this short section of street, such as the Methodist chapel and Roman Catholic chapel
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest	Red	The site has high archival interest in its ability to tell the story of the Congregational Protestant religion arriving in Tamworth.
Historical Association	Red	There is historic association with the development of Congregational Protestant religion in Tamworth, as well as the association with non-conformist chapels along this section of Aldergate.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building does have some presence in the street scene at the junction along Aldergate.
Social and communal value	Red	The church has high value within the community for those who have worshipped, been married, or lost family and friends. As a meeting place the site is important to the collective memories of people and groups which have utilised the building.
Conclusion: The building is important as it demonstrates the increasing favour in which non-conformist religions were having at the time and their development within Tamworth. Although the building is not particularly unique, it is well constructed and does have street presence as well as group value representing a number of non-conformist churches built along this section of Aldergate. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:

Reference: 13
Address: Bolebridge Mews, Bolebridge Street, B79 7PA
Description: Circa 1760 front with 19th wings (Grade II listed) and 20th Century buildings situated around a small arcade of shops and cafes. The modern component attempts to replicate this with red brick, modern shopfronts and is a representation of the historic burgage plots which were once prevalent throughout the town centre.
Original/Current Use: Alleyway, potentially burgage plot/ shopping arcade

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Shopping arcades centred around an alleyway such as this are not particularly unique, however is one of the one arcades situated in Tamworth which attempts to replicate a burgage style plot in a more modern style. The front historic components of the building are Grade II listed with the rear later 20th Century component not forming part of this listing. Historic maps show that the historic burgage plot ran straight, however this mews development turns.
Aesthetic interest		Although the front two buildings represent the Victorian vernacular, much of the historic value has been removed via the new shopping parade which although is attempting to be pastiche, is rather unconvincing.
Completeness		Only the front buildings to Bolebridge street and the building fronting the small alleyway are remaining with the majority of the alleyway fronted by new build.
Group value		Much of the group value lies in the two buildings to the front of the site which are of national interest and contribute to the development along Bolebridge Street and the formation of the alleyway
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest		There is some archival interest in the development of alleyways and burgage plots in Tamworth, with this being one of the few remaining examples.
Historical Association		Much of the historic association has been removed as a result of the new development behind the two buildings to the front of the alleyway, however the passageway still remains and tells the storey of these types of backland development which were once quite prevalent throughout the town centre.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		There will be some social and communal value with this alleyway being a focal point of trade and goods in the 19th Century. However much of the original layout and components of this alleyway have been lost.
Conclusion: The front component of the Bolebridge Mews is listed with the rear wings, however the remaining component of the pathway and modern development to the rear is not listed. Although modern and with unsympathetic elements, it is considered that the principle of Bolebridge Mews as being a thoroughfare still retains local interest and should still be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 014
Address: The Pavilion, Castle Grounds, B79 7NB
Description: Early 20 th Century. Contemporary with the development of the Castle Pleasure Grounds and overlooks recreation ground. Red-brown brick with some herringbone detailing, plain clay tile hipped roof.
Original/Current Use: Pavilion to Bowls Club/ Cafe

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	Although this form of pavilion construction is not particularly unique on a regional scale, it does represent one of the handful of historic pavilion buildings for sports activities in Tamworth during the time of the construction of these pleasure gardens.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building has aesthetic interest in that it was constructed in a more arts and crafts English cottage type design which was a style of its time.
Completeness	Yellow	Although altered internally, the external appearance of the building retains much of its original appearance and architectural integrity.
Group value	Red	The pavilion was part of the overall development and layout of the castle pleasure grounds and has group value as one of the original buildings as part of this development which at the time was focussed on getting Britons more involved in outdoor pursuits
Archaeological interest	Red	Given the proximity to the Castle, there would be high archaeological interest in this area.
Archival interest	Red	The Castle pleasure grounds are important in the development of Tamworth and the building is part of this story which depicts life during the early 20 th Century.
Historical Association	Red	The land and the building have a historic relationship to the fields surrounding the castle, as well as the 20 th Century association with the castle pleasure grounds and its development. As the building was once a pavilion, there is also a historic association with the clubs which utilised the pavilion.
Designed landscape interest	Yellow	The building forms part of the castle pleasure grounds which provides the landscaped setting of the castle.
Landmark status	Green	The building has a limited landmark status, although being prevalent within the grounds of the castle.
Social and communal value	Yellow	There is a relationship with the former clubs which utilised the pavilion which would have acted as a meeting place and still performs this function as a café.

Conclusion: The pavilion is designed in an arts and crafts style, which although not unusual, does play a role in the development of Tamworth, the castle pleasure grounds and the sporting pursuits which were promoted during the early 20th Century. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--------	-----------------	---

Reference: 015
Address: Band Stand, Castle Grounds, B79 7NB
Description: Early 20 th Century. Octagonal timber bandstand constructed into side of landscaped gardens in grounds of Castle. Base stone with store room. Bandstand decorative timber with modern roof and finial. Ground is designated as a Scheduled Ancient Monument
Original/Current Use: Bandstand

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The bandstand is unique in the Tamworth town context being the only such bandstand in the town.
Aesthetic interest		The building has aesthetic interest for its design which incorporates pastiche and modern elements and how it is built into the landscape in order to harmonise with the setting of the castle
Completeness		Although parts of the structure have been restored and altered, it retains much of the sympathetic historic detailing
Group value		The bandstand was part of the overall development and layout of the castle grounds and has group value as one of the original buildings as part of this development which at the time was focussed on getting Britons more involved in outdoor activities such as listening to live music and sporting pursuits
Archaeological interest		The bandstand is located on the site of the Scheduled Ancient Monument belonging to the castle, as such there would be high archaeological interest in this area.
Archival interest		The Castle pleasure grounds are important in the development of Tamworth and the building is part of this story which depicts life during the early 20th Century.
Historical Association		The land and the building have a historic relationship to the fields surrounding the castle, as well as the 20th Century association with the castle pleasure grounds and its development. The building is still utilised as a bandstand and also has association with all of the groups who have performed here.
Designed landscape interest		The building forms part of the castle pleasure grounds which provides the landscaped setting of the castle.
Landmark status		The building has a limited landmark status, although being prevalent within the grounds of the castle.
Social and communal value		There is a relationship with the former entertainers which utilised the bandstand and the community who experienced the performances are important to the building's social and communal value.
Conclusion: The bandstand is the only one of its kind in the Tamworth Town Centre and demonstrates the development of Tamworth and the pleasure grounds during the early 20th Century. The building has been carefully designed to harmonise with the landscaped surrounds of the castle. There is particular interest in the bandstand and the performances which were carried out which features in the collective memories of those who have attended the castle pleasure grounds. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 016
Address: Tamworth Lido, Castle Grounds, B79 7NB
Description: 1927, Originally constructed as an outdoor public bathing pool/ Lido, now infilled with part asphalt and grassed area. U-Shaped building consisting of dressing accommodation, sun bathing area, café and administration buildings. Terraces of coloured concrete surround the pool and the whole building was faced in rustic brickwork, ornamented with artificial stone dressings and banding and rooks covered with mottled green glazed tiles. Roman tiled green roof, small cupola with clock above central entrance, art-deco in style.
Original/Current Use: Lido/ Community hub
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		This is the only Lido in Tamworth borough so is quite rare and unique in the local context.
Aesthetic interest		The building has aesthetic interest in that it was constructed in a more arts and crafts style which matches surrounding buildings and is typical of the design of lidos which were constructed in the early 20 th Century. The tilework and clock are also interesting features of the building.
Completeness		Although altered internally and the pool infilled, the external appearance of the building retains much of its original appearance and architectural integrity with the viewer still being able to see most of how the Lido would have looked like.
Group value		The Lido was part of the overall development and layout of the castle pleasure grounds and has group value as one of the original buildings as part of this development which at the time was focussed on getting Britons more involved in outdoor pursuits
Archaeological interest		Given the proximity to the Castle, there would be high archaeological interest in this area relating to the medieval history, as well as the remnants of the swimming pool which are buried and extend further from the current asphalt area
Archival interest		The Castle pleasure grounds are important in the development of Tamworth and the building is part of this story which depicts life during the early 20 th Century.
Historical Association		The land and the building have a historic relationship to the fields surrounding the castle, as well as the 20 th Century association with the castle pleasure grounds and its development. As the building was once a Lido, there is also a historic association with the clubs which and community who utilised the facility.
Designed landscape interest		The building forms part of the castle pleasure grounds which provides the landscaped setting of the castle.
Landmark status		The building has a limited landmark status, although being prevalent within the grounds of the castle.
Social and communal value		There is a relationship with the former clubs which utilised the Lido which would have acted as a meeting place and still performs this meeting point function as a community hub.
Conclusion: Although the pool has been filled in, the appearance and experience of the Lido is still possible. The building with its tiles is typical of construction of Lidos which were being built throughout the country during the first half of the 20 th Century. Remnants of the original pool may still exist under the grassed and asphalt area and the pool plays a strong role in the development of Tamworth and the collective experiences of the community. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 017
Address: 21-31 Church Lane, B79 7AU
Description: Mid 19 th Century brick terrace 2 storeys with single dormer windows to slate roof. Red and blue brick arches to windows and doorways. Plain stone sills. Most with original window openings but majority of sash windows replaced with UPVC, No.28 has rendered façade.
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The row of terraces represents a quite early speculative development of terraces during the mid-19 th Century.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The buildings have a symmetrical appearance which is important to their character and appearance
Completeness	Yellow	The terrace still maintains much of its symmetry, with walls and fenestration intact, however has unsympathetic alterations such as UPVC windows and doors, and No.28 has rendered the façade.
Group value	Yellow	There is group value in that the terrace represent a phase of development around the church with each of the dwellings having the same design characteristics.
Archaeological interest	Green	There may be some archaeological interest due to the proximity of these dwellings to the church
Archival interest	Green	There will be some archival interest in the relationship of the dwellings to the early speculative development of residential areas in Tamworth.
Historical Association	Blue	The buildings do not appear to be associated with any important persons or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Green	There is some communal and social value as the intactness of the buildings shows how people during the 19 th Century lived.
Conclusion: Although there have been some unsympathetic alterations to the row of terraced dwellings, the design is relatively intact and represents an early speculative residential development in Tamworth. The dwellings maintain a strong symmetry and are associated with phases of residential development which were carried out alongside the church and churchyard during the 19th Century. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 018

Address: 1-8 Church Street , B79 7DH

Description: Early 20th century, 2 storey brick and stucco building. Ground floor shop front running along Aldergate and Church Street elevations have been bricked up between supporting pilasters. First floor has retained attractive Art Deco windows covering the whole of the upper storey to Church Street and the corner with Aldergate, separated by pilasters. Above, a part balustraded, part panelled parapet conceals a hipped roof. Aldergate elevation is plainer and of exposed brick and has attractive Georgian style round arched iron windows.

Original/Current Use: Co-op society/ Supermarket

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is one of the collection of buildings associated with the Co-operative and displays quite ornate facades which although not unique, represent good examples for Tamworth.
Aesthetic interest		The co-op building lies on a very prominent location and acts as a landmark building which contains good styling and detailing, despite the loss of shopfronts.
Completeness		The co-op building has had its shopfronts removed, however is still relatively complete and contains much of its original detailing, particularly on upper levels.
Group value		The Co-op building has group value with the many cooperative buildings across Tamworth, as well as providing the bookend with the White Lion Public House and terrace opposite in providing a landmark entrance at this prominent junction to the historic core
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest		There will be some archival interest in the site given that it is owned by the Co-op who have a close relationship with the development of Tamworth
Historical Association		The building has strong historic associations with the Co-operative Society, with Tamworth being one of the 22 approved branches of the Co-operative network.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has high landmark status and street presence being situated at a major junction in Tamworth.
Social and communal value		The building is strongly associated with the co-operative movement, which began in 1844 as a model aimed at distributing profits amongst its members and helping those most disadvantaged in society.
Conclusion: The co-operative building lies on a landmark site at a prominent junction and is a well designed building which takes advantage of this position. The ground floor has been modified unsympathetically, however still does maintain street presence. The building is also part of the Co-operative group which has special interest with Tamworth being part of the 22 branch groups of the Co-operative Society. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: ✓

Reference: 019
Address: 14 Church Street, Tamworth, B79 7DH
Description: Early 19 th century. Three storey building of red brick and a slate pitched roof with left chimney stack. Front façade has tripartite windows to first and second floor, stone sill surround, later 20 th Century timber shopfront with brick stallriser.
Original/Current Use: Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building represents an early building in Church Street and has some interesting and unique designs for the area, such as the tripartite window arrangement on both upper ground floors.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building represents a high quality development which contributes strongly to the significance of Church Street, one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Completeness	Yellow	Internally much has been altered, as well as the shopfront which is a modern installation. The works are however sympathetic of the building and the character of the historic street.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value in its contribution to the historic street scene
Archaeological Interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest	Yellow	The building represents an early building in the creation and development of Georgian and Victorian streets in Tamworth, which further research has the potential of generating further knowledge to the development of Tamworth
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be related to any important events or people
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building does have presence within the street and is afforded some landmark status
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building is well designed and contains later alterations which are sympathetic to the architectural integrity of the building. The building is one of the earlier examples of retail units within the street and illustrate the development of Tamworth Streets during the 19th Century. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance	Yellow	Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 020
Address: 15 Church Street, Tamworth, B79 7DN
Description: Early 20 th Century public house, red brick with slate roof. Church Street façade is two storeys and has Dutch gable and venetian window to 1 st floor and two segmented arched windows with central keystone. Corporation street façade is 5 bays long, 2 nd to 5 th bay are three storeys, oriel stone window to 1 st bay, ground floor continues Church Street windows with segmented headed arch with keystone.
Original/Current Use: Public House
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The public house is a unique and well designed building incorporating venetian and oriel windows on this prominent corner location.
Aesthetic interest		The public house lies on a junction created by the laying of Corporation Street, which was formerly the driveway to the White House. The building acts as a focal point on this junction and faces both streets which contains good styling and detailing.
Completeness		The public house is relatively complete and contains much of its original detailing.
Group value		The public house building has group value with Church Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest		There will be some archival interest in the site given that new road layouts during the early 20 th Century influenced the opening up of the site for development. Further research may discover further social and communal value.
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with important events or people
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has high landmark status being situated at a junction at Tamworth's main shopping streets
Social and communal value		The site illustrates the rise of public houses in the early 20th Century with new pubs being built and redeveloped. The site and the building also have strong links as a meeting place for over 70 years which has high social and communal value.
Conclusion: Public houses have high value within the community given that they are a place to meet for the community, and which has occurred on this site for over 70 years. The Public House was constructed in the 1930's, and the rise in pub building at this time is evident of the popularity of this particular pub which has adopted good quality and unique styling which fronts onto both Corporation and Church Streets. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 021
Address: 29 Church Street, Tamworth, B79 7BX
Description: Mid 19th Century, 2-storey brick building, stucco walls with ashlar detailing, hipped roof with stone tiles. Two bays fronting street, 3 bays deep, two large chimney stacks.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Office

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is typical of early – mid 19th Century and is interesting with its hipped roof and construction which represents one of the last remaining buildings in this particular 19th Century street scene
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building is of typical construction commonly found in the region however has aesthetic interest in being one of the last components of the 19th Century street scene.
Completeness	Yellow	The building has been altered with aluminium windows and new doors, and chimneys stacks appear to have been rebuilt, however externally is relatively complete.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with the Stone Cross and Co-op building opposite and its contribution to the historic street scene being part of the few buildings of the 19th Century in this street scene.
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest	Light Green	There is some interest in the development of the street, and potential association with the church located next door.
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building has some presence within the street scene to the rear of St. Editha's Church
Social and communal value	Light Green	The building does not have any particular social or communal value, however does contribute to the character of the street scene and the historic environment

Conclusion: The building is one of the last remaining historic buildings along this section of Church Street, with the Stone Cross and Tamworth Cooperative opposite giving an impression of the historic street scene and enclosure. The building is an attractive feature within the street. It is recommended that the site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--------	-----------------	---

Reference: 022
Address: 59 Church Street, Tamworth, B79 7DF
Description: 1936, Art Deco showroom and offices of the TADESCO electricity company. Building constructed by Colonel D'Arcy Chaytor, the man who was largely responsible for bringing electricity to Tamworth. 3 storeys, white stucco, rusticated 1 st and 2 nd floor, canted bay windows at either end from 1 st and 2 nd floors, large canopy over ground floor shopfront. Large two central pilasters leading into central clocktower which formerly rose to a height of 46ft, however has since been lowered by 2 storeys.
Original/Current Use: Electricity Showroom/ Public House

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The Building is a very unique and prominent building in Tamworth, being a large showroom in a purist art deco style.
Aesthetic interest		The art deco showroom has a very prominent position in Church Street which was aimed at introducing electricity to Tamworth and surrounding villages. At the time of construction, the tower would have been one of the tallest buildings in Tamworth.
Completeness		The clocktower has been reduced in height by two storeys and has little remaining historic fabric internally. The front façade does still exhibit the very stylised art deco design.
Group value		The building has group value with Church Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest		There is high archival interest in the site as the building represents the headquarters of the TADESCO electricity company who were very important to the development of Tamworth via the introduction of electricity to Tamworth and the surrounding villages. There is also interest in the role of the building during the second world war where the air raid alarm was placed upon this building.
Historical Association		The building is associated with Colonel D'Arcy Chaytor, a decorated War serviceman and prominent member of Tamworth. The building also has associations with the bringing of large scale electricity to Tamworth and surrounding villages at a time before electricity was nationalised.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building was once one of the tallest buildings in Tamworth, and is still a largely dominant building along Church Street due to its width of frontage and high art deco styled design which sits at the junction of Church Street and Corporation Street.
Social and communal value		The building and its function as an electricity company has a prominent role in the lives of the community and the development of Tamworth with the introduction of large scale electricity to Tamworth and surrounding villages.
Conclusion: The building is quite important for the development of Tamworth and the surrounding villages via the introduction of large scale electricity. The building itself, although the clocktower has been lowered in height still has a high prominence and landmark value in Church Street. The building is of a good quality art deco inspired design. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 023
Address: 63 Church Street, Tamworth, B79 7DF
Description: Late 19 th century, 3-storey red brick with pitched slate roof and large chimney stack to right. One bay wide, part of larger building, the remainder of which is much altered. One later top opening window in original sash opening at first floor level. Sash window at second floor in plain reveals. Later 20 th Century timber shopfront.
Original/Current Use: Dwelling/ takeaway

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Blue	The remaining component of the building is not particularly unique or rare within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest	Blue	The building is of typical Victorian construction commonly found in the region.
Completeness	Green	The building itself is relatively complete with timber windows, however was part of a larger building which has been subdivided from this building and contains larger windows which harm how the entire building would have once looked.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with Church Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest	Green	There is some interest in the development of the street, as well as the subdivision of the current site to what we see today
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Blue	The building does not have any particular landmark status or presence within the street scene
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building is the last remnants of a larger building which has been heavily altered with this building being the last remaining facet of the design of the larger building. The design is typical of buildings built at the time and does not exhibit a presence or landmark status within the street scene. It is recommended that this building be removed from the Local List.
Overall Significance	Blue	Recommendation: X

Reference: 024
Address: 72 Church Street, Tamworth, B79 7DQ
Description: Late 19 th Century, 3-storey red brick, 3 bays wide, mostly timber windows, late 20 th Century shopfront to ground floor with painted brick columns.
Original/Current Use: Dwelling/ Restaurant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is typical of Victorian design however creates the beginning of the historic street scene from this particular prominent location.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building lies close to the prominent corner location and contributes to the historic pattern of development and street scene.
Completeness	Purple	The building has been altered internally, and is partially complete externally with some timber windows, however has a later shopfront and UPVC windows installed.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with Church Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is unlikely to be archaeological interest.
Archival interest	Yellow	There is some interest in the development of the street, as well as the subdivision of the current site to what we see today
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building is close to the corner of a main junction, and contributes to the commencement of the historic street pattern and street scene at this prominent location.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building does have remnants of original design, however is much altered and could benefit from some more historically authentic improvements. The design is typical of buildings built at the time however does assist in giving a presence to the prominent junction. It is recommended that this building is retained on the Local List.
Overall Significance	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 025
Address: 4B Colehill, Tamworth, B79 7HA
Description: Late 19 th Century, originally built as a Georgian house, at one time a vicarage. 2-storey red brick, 3 bays wide, constructed of brick with a pitch slate roof. 1 st floor windows in plain reveals with console brackets and cornice hoods. Moulded cornices to eaves. Ground floor shop with late 20 th Century timber shop front, two blue brick chimney stacks. Two storey rear wing with blue brick plinth and timber windows, blind windows to ground floor.
Original/Current Use: Dwelling/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Green	The building style is not particularly rare or unique to Tamworth
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building represents a good example of a Georgian style residence which good refined detailing and which has been converted to a retail unit with a sympathetic timber shopfront.
Completeness	Red	Although altered internally on the ground floor, the exterior of the building is relatively intact with timber windows and a timber shopfront which is sympathetic to the design of the building.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with Colehill and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest	Green	There is some interest in the development of the street, as well as the subdivision of the current site to what we see today. There is also interest in the relationship to William MacGregor.
Historical Association	Red	The building is associated with William MacGregor a local philanthropist who lived here and was vicar of Tamworth 1878-1887. Macgregor undertook many activities to aid the poor and founded the first Hospital of Tamworth, and was asked to help found the Tamworth Co-op Society and became treasurer in 1886. Macgregor also created the first free library in Tamworth, and was associated with the construction of churches at Glascote and Hopwas.
Designed landscape interest	Black	n/a
Landmark status	Green	The building does have some presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building

Conclusion: The building is not particularly unique in terms of its design, however represents a good example of a Georgian building which is externally relatively complete and intact. The historic association with philanthropist William MacGregor is of high importance and the building together with remaining buildings along the street represent the development of Tamworth over time. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓
----------------------	--------	-----------------	---

Reference: 026
Address: 5 Colehill, Tamworth, B79 7HA
Description: 1897, 3-storey red brick with slate roof. Colehill frontage is 7 bays wide, the first 3 bays are earlier than 4-7 which then continue down Church Street. First 3 bay window range on both levels, ground floor central tripartite arched window, large gable with parapet, large stone string course with wording "Tamworth Industrial Cooperative Society." Ground floor early 20th Century shopfront with faience entablature which continues to Church Street with crittall glass transom. Bays 4-7 are taller with large gable with 4 window range to first floor and large segmented headed window to 2nd floor. Church Street is four bays wide with a stepped gable above 2nd and 3rd bay, segmented headed windows to 2nd floor and stone surrounded flat headed windows to 1st floor and pitched roof with bellcote. Internally has original staircase with timber handrail, decorative iron balusters and pink, green, burgundy and white tiles, original safe from Walker & Son, Birmingham and original timber ladies toilet cubicle.
Original/Current Use: Cooperative Headquarters Building.

Page 67

DRAFT

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is the headquarters and the showpiece of the Cooperative Society buildings which are constructed throughout Tamworth. The design of the building is quite ornate and a rare example of external and internal fixtures and fittings
Aesthetic interest		The co-op building lies on a very prominent location and acts as a landmark building which contains good styling and detailing. Internally the main staircase with tiles surrounds is of a particularly high standard, as are historic fixtures and fittings such as a historic safe and ladies toilet cubicle. The Boardroom also is particularly lavish and contains historic fixtures and fitting.
Completeness		The co-op building has had some alteration to the rear during the 1960's, however the staircase is particularly good feature, as is the Boardroom.
Group value		The Co-op building has group value with the many cooperative buildings across Tamworth, as well as the placement of the building amongst Colehill, a main shopping street of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		There is some recent archaeological interest with the remnants of the Town's Swimming pool tiling within the basement of the building
Archival interest		There will be some archival interest in the site given that it is owned by the Co-op who have a close relationship with the development of Tamworth. There is also interest in the relationship with William MacGregor
Historical Association		The building has strong historic associations with the Co-operative Society, with Tamworth being one of the 22 approved branches of the Co-operative network. This particular site was also part funded by William MacGregor, a local philanthropist who helped create the Cooperative Society branch as well as benefiting a number of projects to assist the poor, such as St. Editha's hospital, schools and parks, and the first free library.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has high landmark status being situated at a major junction in Tamworth with a dominance in building style which fronts both Colehill and Church Street.
Social and communal value		The building is strongly associated with the co-operative movement, which began in 1844 as a model aimed at distributing profits amongst its members and helping those most disadvantaged in society.
Conclusion: The headquarters of the Cooperative society exhibits a design which is unique and of a very high quality which also leads to the internal fixtures and fittings, particularly the stairwell, boardroom and safe. Elements of past buildings such as the swimming pool also exist. Although altered in the 1960's with the expansion of a department stall the front component facing Colehill and Church Street is of particular high quality and historic association with a leading philanthropist and the Cooperative movement. The significance of the building is comparable to those of a national level. It is recommended that the building be retained on the local list and submitted for consideration for national listing.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 027
Address: 5 College Lane, Tamworth, B79 7HA
Description: early-mid 19th century, two storey stuccoed brick building. Tiled roof with 2 red brick chimney stacks and 2 dormer windows. Modern shop front.
Original/Current Use: Dwelling/ Retail unit

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is typical of early – mid 19 th Century and is not particularly unique or rare within Tamworth, however is unique in that it represents one of the last remaining buildings in the 19 th Century street scene
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building is of typical construction commonly found in the region however has aesthetic interest in being one of the last components of the 19 th Century street scene.
Completeness	Yellow	The building has been altered internally, and is relatively complete externally with a later shopfront.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with College Lane and its contribution to the historic street scene being part of the only two buildings of the 19 th Century.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest	Green	There is some interest in the development of the street, and potential association with the National School located next door.
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Blue	The building does not have any particular landmark status or presence within the street scene
Social and communal value	Green	The building does not have any particular social or communal value, however does contribute to the character of the street scene and the historic environment
Conclusion: The building is a good example of 19 th Century construction and makes a contribution to the historic street scene and has high group value given that it is part of the only 2 buildings left which represent the 19 th Century street. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 028
Address: St Editha's Church Hall, College Lane, Tamworth, B79 7LP
Description: 1827, Originally built as a 'National School'. Two storeys stuccoed brick, 5 painted reveals with stone sills. 5 modern windows at ground floor level in reduced openings. Moulded cornice to eaves. Red brick to gable. Later extensions to side and rear. Recent replacement or original entrance portico with pillars.
Original/Current Use: National School/ Church Hall

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is an early example of a National School, constructed in 1827, which is considered both unique and rare for Tamworth, as well as being one of two buildings left in this street which represent the street scene of the 19 th Century
Aesthetic interest		Although simply constructed, the building has some aesthetic interest as quite an early building within Tamworth which retains much of its original character and appearance
Completeness		Internally the building shows little evidence of being a National School, however does retain much of its external appearance, windows etc.
Group value		The building is disconnected from the Church and the new development surrounding also takes away much of the historic context, however with No.5 represents the last remnants of the 19 th Century street scene
Archaeological interest		There is limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		The site could benefit from further research into the origins of the national board school as well as the current relationship with the Church and community
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with any people or events, however further research may be able to improve this.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The site is quite prominent in this street, albeit this is because it is one of the few 19 th Century buildings left
Social and communal value		As the building was an early example of a national school, there will be social and communal value with regards to this use and the collective memories of former pupils and their families who associate with this building. There is also value in the current use and the community groups which make use of the building.
Conclusion: Although simply designed, the building represents an early example of a national school building within Tamworth and has significance for people who associate with the school building as well as its current use as part of the church. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference:029
Address: Carnegie Centre, Corporation Street, Tamworth, B79 7DN
Description: 1905, Red brick with stone dressings. Tall Single storey with hipped roof and two forward full height projecting gables with large 20 th Venetian windows (replaced). Rusticated central doorway with arch. Slate roof with ornamental cupola recently replaced.
Original/Current Use: Library/ Community hub

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building was constructed as the first free library for Tamworth and is therefore unique in this context
Aesthetic interest		The building has aesthetic value and is a good example of early 20 th Century design.
Completeness		Much of the external appearance still intact and sympathetically restored and replaced.
Group value		The building has group value being associated initially with a civic hub with municipal offices (white house), Drill Hall, Assembly rooms all located nearby.
Archaeological interest		The site may have archaeological interest due to the proximity of St. Editha's church and recent archaeological finds occurring at the assembly rooms interest
Archival interest		The site could benefit from further research into the influence of the first free library upon the Victorian community with the improvement of health, welfare and education. There is also interest in the relationship to William MacGregor.
Historical Association		The building was donated by William MacGregor, a local philanthropist who helped create the Cooperative Society branch as well as benefiting a number of projects to assist the poor, such as St. Editha's hospital, schools and parks, and this first free library.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have landmark status and presence within the street scene which is part of the building's significance
Social and communal value		As the first free library in Tamworth, the building has high social and communal value originally as a place of learning as well as meeting point, to today where the building is utilised by a number of community groups which continue to assist the community.
Conclusion: The building is significant to Tamworth predominantly as a result of its role in the community, initially as the first free library to today's use as a community hub. The building is a good example of 20 th Century design and has a presence within the street scene. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall significance		Recommendation:

Reference: 030
Address: Drill Hall, Corporation Street, Tamworth, B79 7DN
Description: 1911. Originally consisted of a drill hall, miniature rifle range, officers and NCO's rooms, billiard room, canteen and TA club. Red brick with yellow brick banding, 5 bays wide, with large central gable with 4 pilasters leading into the parapet and ball finials. Large stone door surround with later 20 th Century entrance with carved lettering 'Staffordshire Territorial Force Association.'
Original/Current Use: Drill Hall/ Business Hub

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Drill halls are relatively rare and unique, with this drill hall being the only remaining drill hall in Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The drill hall retains its external appearance, which is a good and prominent example of an early 20 th Century public building.
Completeness		Internally there is little remnant of the drill hall with the internal spaces subdivided into offices, however the external facades are relatively complete, although the rear wall has been demolished and the building extended to the rear.
Group value		There is high group value with the building situated in a civic core with the library, Assembly Rooms, and council offices (formerly in the White House, now relocated)
Archaeological interest		The site has limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		The site would benefit from further research, with the site originally being used as a Methodist Church and then the Drill Hall which served through both world wars.
Historical Association		The building was opened by the Lord Lieutenant, the Earl of Dartmouth on 20 th Dec 1911 and was the headquarters of the 'C' company, 6 th Battalion, North Staffordshire Regiment and is associated with those who fought in both world wars.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have landmark status and presence within the street scene which is part of the building's significance
Social and communal value		The building has high value for its role during both world wars and would feature in the collective memories of the community whose ancestors fought in the wars and utilised this site

Conclusion: The building played an essential component as the headquarters of the 'C' Company of the Staffordshire Regiment and played a training role for the community who served in both world wars. The building has a presence in the street scene, and although modified internally, externally represents a good example of early 20th Century architecture. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance		Recommendation	✓
----------------------	--	----------------	---

Reference: 031
Address: 7-8 George Street, Tamworth, B79 7LH
Description: Mid-late 19 th century, three storeys building with a five window range with 2/2 sashes, redbrick with yellow brick dressings, banding and quoins. Highly decorated stone eaves cornice. Large left and central chimney stacks, two later 20 th Century shop fronts.
Original/Current Use: Townhouse/ Retail unit
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building has some uniqueness in its design for Tamworth with a very ornate façade which stands apart from surrounding buildings.
Aesthetic interest		The building exhibits good Victorian design to the front façade with the use of decorative stonework to the cornices, large chimney stacks and coloured brick to accentuate the features of the façade.
Completeness		Although the internal spaces have been reconfigured, the external appearance is relatively intact and the modern shopfronts largely sympathetic to the design of the building.
Group value		The building has group value with the retail trade along George Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		Due to the proximity of the castle, there may be some archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building due to its decorative façade and scale does have presence in the street scene and has some landmark status
Social and communal value		The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: Given the scale and ornamentation in the design of the building, the building has a presence in the street scene and contributes strongly to the character of the historic street scene which represents one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 032
Address: 15-16 George Street, Tamworth, B79 7LN
Description: Early 20 th century, former picture theatre in Art Deco style. Two-storey with stone façade to 1st floor and modern shop front with central doorway and marble fascia. 5 window range with metal glazing bars at first floor level with large stone columns between leading to a large stepped parapet.
Original/Current Use: Picture Theatre/ Retail
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is one of the last remaining examples in Tamworth of a picture theatre in the art deco style which was prevalent in the early 20 th Century. There were previously two picture theatres constructed along George St in the early 20 th Century
Aesthetic interest		Although not overly ornate, the building does have some good architectural detailing of the art deco style and is a positive building within the street scene
Completeness		Although the internal spaces have been reconfigured, the external appearance is relatively in-tact and the modern shopfronts with marble fascia is largely sympathetic to the design of the building.
Group value		The building has group value with the retail trade along George Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		Due to the proximity of the castle, there may be some archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and to the development of technology in Tamworth with the introduction of moving pictures.
Historical Association		The building has association to the development of moving pictures to Tamworth
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building due to its art deco style stands out from the more Georgian, Victorian and modern facades of surrounding buildings and does have presence in the street scene and has some landmark status
Social and communal value		The building is part of a key movement in technology in Tamworth with the introduction of moving pictures. It will therefore be important for the community who may have attended the building and their ancestors.
Conclusion: The building represents a key development in the social activities and technology in Tamworth with the introduction of moving pictures. The building itself is relatively intact and is of a good art deco design which has presence within the street scene. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 033
Address: 31/31a/31b George Street, Tamworth, B79 7LJ
Description: Late 19 th century, 3-storey, red brick, 6 bays wide with 2/2 sash windows at first and second floors in plain reveals with plain stone lintels and sills. Moulded brick eaves, 3 x dormer windows and two large chimney stacks. Tiled pitched and gable roof and three late 20 th Century timber shop fronts.
Original/Current Use: Townhouse/ Retail, public house

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is not particularly unique in design, however is one of the older buildings which represent the historic street scene.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building exhibits good Victorian design to the front façade large chimney stacks and is of a scale which has presence within the street scene
Completeness	Yellow	Although the internal spaces have been reconfigured, the external appearance is relatively intact and the modern shopfronts largely sympathetic to the design of the building.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with the retail trade along George Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	Due to the proximity of the castle, there may be some archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest	Yellow	There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building due to its age and scale does have presence in the street scene and has some landmark status
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building has a presence in the street scene and contributes strongly to the character of the historic street which represents one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 034
Address: 33 George Street, Tamworth, B79 7LJ
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is not particularly rare or unique, however represents one of the older Victorian pubs which is still in operation as such.
Aesthetic interest		The public house is dwarfed by surrounding buildings, but is of simplistic design which is typical of Victorian buildings in Tamworth and which supports the historic street scene of one of Tamworth's main shopping streets
Completeness		The public house is relatively complete and contains much of its original detailing and new installations such as the shopfront as sympathetic with the design and period of the building.
Group value		The building has group value with the retail trade along George Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		Due to the proximity of the castle, there may be some archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building and the stories of people utilising the pub as a meeting place.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does not have a very prominent appearance within the street scene
Social and communal value		The site illustrates a building which has retained its public house use for over 100 years and has strong links as a meeting place which has high social and communal value amongst the community.
Conclusion: Public houses have an important role in the provision of a meeting place which has strong links with the community and has done so for over 100 years. The building, although not unique does contribute to the historic character of the street scene in one of Tamworth's main shopping streets. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 035
Address: 27 Lichfield Street, Tamworth, B79 7QE
Description: Late 19 th Century, 2 storey single bay, red brick with slate roof, originally dwelling house. 1 arched 2/2 sash window on ground floor with plain stone sill, 1st floor has large later window with 3/3 lights and top hung. Timber doorcase to right, arched window to second floor. Later dormer with hipped roof. Large workshop range to rear, 7 bays wide contemporary with front dwelling, later flat rooved extension to rear
Original/Current Use: House and workshop/ vet & residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		One of the last remaining houses with workshop range to the rear. The building also is interesting for that it is the last of the domestic scale buildings in this section of the street, with the majority being demolished to make way for the housing towers during the 1960's
Aesthetic interest		The domestic scale of the building along with the workshop range is of interest
Completeness		The building and range to the rear have been converted into dwellings and a Vet practice, however the building retains much of its external form
Group value		Although of a more domestic scale than the buildings adjoining, the building has group value for its contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		The site has limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the domestication of industry with a domestic frontage and workshops to the rear. The building will also contribute to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building.
Historical Association		It does not appear that the building is associated with any important people or events, however does illustrate the domestication of industrial processes.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has limited landmark status within the street scene
Social and communal value		The building has social and communal value as the last remnants of the domestic form of development which was once along this street before the development of the housing towers which contributes to the collective memory of the place.
Conclusion: The building is important as the last example of the domestic street scene along this section of Lichfield Street the majority of which was demolished during the late 20 th Century. The building with the domestic building to the front and workshop to the rear also demonstrates the domestication of industry and is important for demonstrating how the Victorian street scene will have once looked. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 036
Address: 97 Lichfield Street, Tamworth, B79 7QF
Description: Early 19 th century, three storeys, three bays wide, stucco with ashlar detailing, with a high parapet and pitched roof behind. Glazing to 2 nd floor 3/3 sashes, 1 st floor 6/6 sashes and ground floor 3/6 sashes. Timber doorcase to 1 st bay with 6 panelled door and rectangular fanlight above
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Office

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is not particularly rare or unique within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The building represents a good example of Georgian architecture and is prominent within the historic street scene.
Completeness		Externally, the building is relatively complete with timber windows, door and exterior ashlar finish.
Group value		The building has group value as part of the historic component of the street where early Georgian buildings are prevalent.
Archaeological interest		The site has limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated important people and or companies occupying the building.
Historical Association		It does not appear that the building is associated with any important people or events, however does illustrate the development of this component of Tamworth with larger gentleman's townhouses.
Designed landscape interest		n/a
Landmark status		The building is quite prominent and has a presence within the street scene, affording some landmark status.
Social and communal value		The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.
Conclusion: The building is one of the larger gentleman's town houses which have been constructed along with a number of similar properties. This is particularly important as it illustrates a development phase of Tamworth, and along with the relative intactness of the building has a presence within the street scene. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 037
Address: 97A Lichfield Street, Tamworth, B79 7QF
Description: Mid 19 th Century, Two storeys, 3 bays wide, stucco. Late 20 th Century UPVC windows, all windows with stone lintel and keystone, late 20 th Century Entrance to 3 rd bay, 1 st bay smaller timber doorcase with flat canopy and 6 panel door.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Public House

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/Uniqueness	Blue	The building is not particularly rare or unique within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	Although largely modified with unsympathetic materials such as UPVC windows and damaged fascia, the building represents part of the historic street scene of larger and substantial gentleman's townhouses
Completeness	Purple	A new entrance and windows and lack of maintenance are unsympathetic to the architectural integrity of the building.
Group value	Red	The building has group value as part of the historic component of the street where early Georgian buildings are prevalent.
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site has limited archaeological interest
Archival interest	Green	There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated important people and or companies occupying the building.
Historical Association	Yellow	It does not appear that the building is associated with any important people or events, however does illustrate the development of this component of Tamworth with larger gentleman's townhouses.
Designed landscape interest	Black	n/a
Landmark status	Green	The building is not prominent within the street scene, but is seen in the group collective of larger gentleman's status buildings.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.
Conclusion: Although not unique in this context, there is a large value in the group of buildings which represented the more larger Gentleman's dwelling which are found within this section of Tamworth Town. The building has suffered from a large amount of unsympathetic alterations when converted to a public house use and which should be removed with any new use of the building.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Page 79

Reference: 038
Address: 98 Lichfield Street, Tamworth, B79 7QF
Description: Early-mid 19 th Century, three storeys, 2 bays wide, red brick with blue brick plinth, pitched roof. 1 st bay narrower than second, windows to 1 st bay are 3/3 sash to 2 nd floor, 3/6 to 1 st floor with timber doorcase, fanlight, and door below. 2 nd bay is 4/8 sash to 2 nd floor, and 8/12 sash to 1 st and ground floor.
Original/Current Use: Dwelling/ Office

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is not particularly rare or unique within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The building represents a good example of Georgian architecture and is prominent within the historic street scene.
Completeness		Externally, the building is relatively complete with timber windows, door and exterior brick finish. Later building erected in garden
Group value		The building has group value as part of the historic component of the street where early Georgian buildings are prevalent.
Archaeological interest		The site has limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated important people and or companies occupying the building.
Historical Association		It does not appear that the building is associated with any important people or events, however does illustrate the development of this component of Tamworth with larger gentleman's townhouses.
Designed landscape interest		n/a
Landmark status		The building is quite prominent and has a presence within the street scene, affording some landmark status.
Social and communal value		The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.
Conclusion: The building is one of the larger gentleman's town houses which have been constructed along with a number of similar properties. This is particularly important as it illustrates a development phase of Tamworth, and along with the relative intactness of the building has a presence within the street scene. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: ✓

Reference: 039
Address: 1 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Early - Mid 19 th Century. Two Storeys, 1 bay to Lower Gungate and 3 bays to Little Church Lane. Painted brick, cladding removed. Timber shopfront window to lower Gungate, timber windows and two doorways, one with fanlight to Little Church Lane.
Original/Current Use: (former Medieval Deanery) Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20 th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness	Green	This particular building is one of the original buildings of the former Church Row, later repairs such as windows and doors are sympathetic, however previous cladding has scarred the building considerably.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking Church Row, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Red	The site has high archaeological interest due to the site being within the Scheduled Monument of the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest	Red	The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay under this site.
Historical Association	Red	The site itself is important as it is constructed within a medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Red	The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Georgian/Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The site itself is nationally important as it is part of a Schedule Ancient Monument and may contain remnants of medieval life. The building itself represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:

D39081

Reference: 040
Address: 2 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Early-Mid 19 th Century. Two storeys, rendered brick, 3/6 sash window with plain cill to 1 st floor, multi-paned timber bow window to ground floor.
Original/Current Use: (former Medieval Deanery) Residential/Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest		The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness		This particular building is one of the original buildings of the former Church Row, with timber bow window a feature of the ground floor.
Group value		The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking Little Church Lane, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		The site has high archaeological interest due to the site being within the Scheduled Monument of the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest		The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay under this site.
Historical Association		The site itself is important as it is constructed within a medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Georgian/Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The site itself is nationally important as it is part of a Schedule Monument and may contain remnants of medieval life. The building itself represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

1899 202

Reference: 041
Address: 3 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Early-Mid 19 th Century. Two Storeys, rendered brick, 3/6 sash window with plain cill to 1 st floor, lantern, multi-paned timber bow window to ground floor.
Original/Current Use: (former Medieval Deanery) Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest		The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness		This particular building is one of the original buildings of the former Church Row, with timber bow window a feature of the ground floor.
Group value		The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking Little Church Lane, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		The site has high archaeological interest due to the site being within the Scheduled Monument of the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest		The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay under this site.
Historical Association		The site itself is important as it is constructed within a medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Georgian/Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.

Conclusion: The site itself is nationally important as it is part of a Schedule Ancient Monument and may contain remnants of medieval life. The building itself represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--	-----------------	---

Reference: 042
Address: 4 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Early-Mid 19 th Century. rendered brick, two storeys two bays wide 3/6 sash window to 1 st floor and side hung casement, later UPVC bow window to ground floor, small hipped porch over entrance.
Original/Current Use: (former Medieval Deanery) Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness	Green	This particular building is one of the original buildings of the former Church Row, however later alterations such as a UPVC bow window is unsympathetic to the building
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking Church Row, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Red	The site has high archaeological interest due to the site being within the Scheduled Monument of the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest	Red	The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay under this site.
Historical Association	Red	The site itself is important as it is constructed within a medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Red	The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Georgian/Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The site itself is nationally important as it is part of a Schedule Ancient Monument and may contain remnants of medieval life. The building itself represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:

Reference: 043
Address: 5 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Late 19 th Century, re-fronted in the early 20 th Century. Single storey, red brick with pitched tile roof, former barn converted to retail. Large bow window to front above header course plinth, part rendered.
Original/Current Use: Barn/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is later than many along this courtyard, however relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness	Yellow	This particular building is later and was an outbuilding converted into retail, with the installation of a bow window in an attempt to fit in with the common vernacular found in this group.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking the former Church Row, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site has archaeological interest due to the proximity of the site to the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest	Yellow	The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay nearby this site.
Historical Association	Yellow	The site itself is important as it is constructed close to the medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The building itself although a later installation, represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Page 85

Reference: 044
Address: 6 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Early – Mid 19 th Century, appears to have been reduced in width with 20 th Century gable end. Single storey 3 bays wide, rendered brick with two segmented brick headed windows with central doorway, single segmented headed window to side gable.
Original/Current Use: Barn/ Cafe

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is one of the original buildings fronting this courtyard, and is relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness	Green	Although original, the building has been highly modified with windows added, and the width shortened.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking the former Church Row, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site has archaeological interest due to the proximity of the site to the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest	Yellow	The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay nearby this site.
Historical Association	Yellow	The site itself is important as it is constructed close to the medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The building itself although highly altered, represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 045
Address: 7 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Early 20 th Century, two storeys, two bays wide, brick finish with rendered ground floor. UPVC windows to 1 st Floor, 2 windows to ground floor with brick segmented heads and plain cills.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is later than many along this courtyard, however relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness	Green	This particular building is later and was an infill development which was later converted into retail, unfortunately it has unsympathetic alterations such as UPVC windows.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking Little Church Lane, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site has archaeological interest due to the proximity of the site to the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest	Yellow	The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay nearby this site.
Historical Association	Yellow	The site itself is important as it is constructed close to the medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The building itself although unsympathetically altered, represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 046
Address: 8 Little Church Lane, Tamworth, B79 7AX
Description: Late 19 th Century, two storeys, two bays wide, brick finish with rendered ground floor. UPVC windows to 1 st Floor, 2 windows to ground floor with brick segmented heads and plain cills.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is later than many along this courtyard, however is relatively unique within Tamworth being part of a small courtyard of early-mid 20th Century dwellings leading up to the church
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The group value of this small homogenous group of buildings is of interest
Completeness	Green	This particular building is later and was an infill development which was later converted into retail, unfortunately it has unsympathetic alterations such as UPVC windows.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as part of an early group of buildings overlooking the former Church Row, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site has archaeological interest due to the proximity of the site to the former medieval deanery.
Archival interest	Yellow	The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Little Church Lane, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay nearby this site.
Historical Association	Yellow	The site itself is important as it is constructed close to the medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The building itself although unsympathetically altered, represents a small group of cottages centered around a small lane off one of the main shopping streets leading to the church and is significant in this context. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 047
Address: 3a Lower Gungate, Tamworth, B79 7BA
Description: Late 19 th century, 2 storey red brick, one sash window to first floor level in plain reveals with plain stone lintel and sill. Brick dentil course to eaves. Tiled roof. Original early shop front.
Original/Current Use: (former Medieval Deanery) Dwelling / Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is attached to and forms part of the collective group of formerly domestic buildings and barns to the rear. The building itself contributes to this group and has quite an early shopfront which is rare in this context.
Aesthetic interest		The building is of Victorian vernacular, however given much of its original historic detailing, plays a strong role towards the significance of the historic street scene.
Completeness		The building retains much of its original detailing with an early shopfront and historic detailing.
Group value		The building has high group value and is joined to listed buildings which are part of the same ownership and barns to the rear which form a farmstead like appearance.
Archaeological interest		The site has high archaeological interest due to the site being within the Scheduled Monument of the former medieval deanery, in which some of the deanery walls remain to the rear of the site.
Archival interest		The site has high archival interest not only to the current arrangement of dwellings around Church Row, but the medieval deanery remnants which lay under this site.
Historical Association		The site itself is important as it is constructed within a medieval deanery, however there is no indication that the current building is associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		The site itself has high social and communal value by telling us information regarding the lives of medieval people in association with the medieval deanery. The current building does not have as much social and communal value however does reflect the historic Victorian street scene and the collective memories of the community to this particular group of buildings.
Conclusion: The building is quite unique within Tamworth as it still represents the traditional dwelling to the front (now converted) and series of workshops to the rear which would have been prevalent amongst historic Tamworth. There is also archaeological importance with the building located on the grounds of the medieval deanery, a Scheduled Monument. The building itself maintains much of its historic detailing and contributes strongly to the character and appearance of the conservation area and the historic street scene. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 048
Address: 19 Lower Gungate, Tamworth, B79 7AT
Description: 1894, Two storeys, 4 bays wide, red brick with blue brick plinth, Paired ground floor windows separated by pilasters and substantial lintels and sills, a central round arched entrance and carved motif above with date stamp 1894, fanlight with etched glass showing Prince of Wales Pub – now boarded over.
Original/Current Use: Public House

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is not particularly rare or unique, however represents one of the older Victorian pubs which is still in operation as such. In particular the motif with the wheat sheaf is an interesting feature to the front facade
Aesthetic interest		The public house forms part of a historic terrace, but is quite ornate in its detailing amongst Victorian buildings in Tamworth and which supports the historic street scene of one of Tamworth's main shopping streets.
Completeness		The public house is externally relatively complete and contains much of its original detailing and new installations such as the shopfront as sympathetic with the design and period of the building, however some elements such as the historic fanlight above the entrance door have been block up.
Group value		The building has group value with the retail trade along Lower Gungate and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		Due to the proximity of the site to the remains of the medieval deanery, there may be some archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		The site illustrates a building which has retained its public house use for over 100 years and has strong links as a meeting place which has high social and communal value amongst the community.
Conclusion: The public house is a later installation during the late 19th Century, however has maintained this use for over 100 years. This is particularly important from a social context and the use of the public house as a meeting place. The public house lies in close proximity to the formal medieval deanery and further archival interest may be gathered by further research to the archaeological potential as well as communal value and historic association to important people or events which may have taken place in the public house. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 049
Address: 23-25A Lower Gungate, Tamworth, B79 7AT
Description: Late 19 th Century, two storeys, red brick with terracotta string course, six bays wide with central carriageway between two later timber shopfronts and one chimney stacks. Two storey brick workshop to rear boundary
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is not particularly rare or unique within Tamworth, however does maintain good historic detailing and also retains a former workshop to the rear.
Aesthetic interest		The building has value in that it represents a good example of 19 th Century vernacular and still incorporates a carriageway entrance, rear yard and former workshop building
Completeness		The building is relatively complete and changes such as shopfronts have been undertaken sympathetically. The yard to the rear is also quite complete with workshop building and yard to the rear.
Group value		The building has group value with the retail trade along Lower Gungate and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. There is also value in the collection of outbuildings to the rear which contribute to the historic nature of the property.
Archaeological interest		There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest		There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The site is a good example of vernacular of the late 19th Century and also is relatively complete with a historic workshop to the rear. The building contributes strongly to the historic street scene and demonstrates the historic layout with carriageway entrance to the centre leading onto a rear yard and workshop. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 050
Address: 27-33 Lower Gungate, Tamworth, B79 7AT
Description: Late 19 th century three storey tall and narrow workmen's cottages built on the site of the old grammar school, demolished in c.1867-8. Yellow brick to 1 st and 2 nd floor stucco to ground floor, 5 bays wide. Between the first floor windows three of the old stone Ionic capitals and a fleur de lys seal from the grammar school have been preserved. Later 20 th Century ground floor arcaded recessed shop fronts, except 5 th bay. Row of single storey outbuildings along rear
Original/Current Use: (Former Grammar School) Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	Although the design is not unique within Tamworth, the use of Gault brick is unusual in this area which is predominantly red brick, with yellow brick needing to be brought in from outside the region. The maintaining of the outbuildings to the rear is also of interest.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building has value in that it represents a contrasting appearance within the street scene and good example of 19 th Century vernacular and which incorporates elements of the previous building via the use of motifs and ionic capitals. The building still incorporates a outbuildings to the rear yard
Completeness	Yellow	Much of the building maintains the architectural integrity of the building and rear yard, however the late shopfronts do distract from this historic authenticity.
Group value	Red	The building has group value with the retail trade along Lower Gungate and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. There is also value in the collection of outbuildings to the rear which contribute to the historic nature of the property.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest
Archival interest	Yellow	There would be some interest in the contribution of the building to the street scene and any associated companies trading from the building, as well as former uses such as the workers cottages and grammar school, which once occupied the site.
Historical Association	Green	The current buildings do not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events, however the site in which the grammar school sat had associations to Thomas Guy a local philanthropist and MP who was educated at the school
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building does have landmark status being located at the junction of Gungate and Spinning School Lane and the use of yellow brick which makes the building quite distinctive within the street scene.
Social and communal value	Green	The number of uses and redevelopments of the sites is indicative of what was occurring within Tamworth during the 19 th Century. The relocation of the Grammar School and use of the site for workers cottages and then retail development is also important as well as the outbuildings which tell the storey of how residents during the 19 th Century lived and worked.

Conclusion: The building lies at a junction within the town centre and combined with the use of Gault Brick to the front façade, gives the building presence within the street scene. The land is tied to historic uses with a former grammar school, in which some remnants are presented on the façade, and also late uses such as the workers cottage and then eventual redevelopment of the building into retail uses with new shopfronts. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:

Recommendation:

DRAFT

Reference: 051
Address: Guys Almshouses, Lower Gungate, Tamworth, B79 7AN
Description: Substantial rebuilding in 1913, 17 th Century origins, extended 1926-1928 with quadrangle and capacity for 28. Lower Gungate 11 bays wide, red brick with stone plinth and quoins. Large arched entrance with stone surrounds and Guy's Coat of Arms above. Steeped hipped roof with lantern and 2 chimney stacks. Almshouses to rear joined together, red brick with protruding gables towards Spinning School Lane, with tile hanging on gables. Central courtyard formerly used as allotments.
Original/Current Use: Almshouses

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The almshouses are unique within the town centre of Tamworth being the only almshouses present in the town centre.
Aesthetic interest		The almshouses have aesthetic interest within the town centre being a landmark building with prominent entrance and architectural detailing and a scale and massing reflective of almshouses with communal courtyard, which was once utilised as an allotment gardens for use of the almshouse residents.
Completeness		The almshouses are relatively complete and maintain much of their historic detailing.
Group value		Although later than much of the historic street scene the prominence of the building does blend appropriately within the historic street scene giving the building group value
Archaeological interest		The site has been an almshouse since the 17 th Century and some remnants of the original construction may remain.
Archival interest		There is high archival interest in the site with the relationship to Thomas Guy and how the poor were catered for during the 17 th Century to today
Historical Association		The building was funded by Thomas Guy, an MP for Tamworth from 1695-1708 who was educated next door in the former grammar school, and who also funded the construction of the Town Hall, and also a hospital in Southwark, London
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have landmark status being located at the junction of Gungate and Spinning School Lane and the more arts and crafts inspired styling of the almshouses being quite distinctive within the street scene.
Social and communal value		The building has strong social and communal value in that it represents a very early example of catering to the needs of the poor with the origins of the site dating from the 17 th Century. The building also demonstrates the role of philanthropy within society and which is still active today.

Conclusion: Almshouses have been on the site since the 17th Century, with the use continuing to the present day. This is particularly important in Tamworth's history and how philanthropic gifts were undertaken within the town. The building also has associations with Thomas Guy who funded the original construction, and the buildings continue to be named after him. The buildings are of more arts and crafts inspired design, but still have a prominence within the street scene at this road junction. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--	-----------------	---

Reference: 052
Address: The Globe, Lower Gungate, Tamworth, B79 7AT
Description: 1901, Public House, red brick, 5 bays wide. Ground floor has blue brick plinth with glazed bricks to cill height. Pilasters on ground floor which separate bays, 2 nd floor has pinnacles which break through the curved parapet, which has a larger triangular section to the centre. Carriageway entrance to 1 st bay, stained and etched glass remains.
Original/Current Use: Public House
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is quite unique in Tamworth being a large and prominent coaching inn, now public house close to a prominent intersection.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building is a high quality example of a Victorian/Edwardian coaching inn and not only has a prominence in the street scene, but exhibits decorative facades with tiles and decorative brickwork.
Completeness	Yellow	The building is relatively complete, although unsympathetic UPVC windows have been installed and internal partitioning removed.
Group value	Yellow	The building has become detached from the historic street scene with a car park to one side and a new club to the other side. There is still some linkage to the opposite side of the road to the historic street scene
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The building lies in close proximity to Offa's Dyke, so there may be archaeological potential.
Archival interest	Yellow	Further research into the role of the coaching inn would be beneficial in understanding the development of Tamworth during the early 20 th Century.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	Due to the building's scale, decoration and proximity to a prominent road junction, the building has status and presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value	Red	The site illustrates a building which has retained its public house use for over 100 years and has strong links as a meeting place which has high social and communal value amongst the community.
Conclusion: The public house is a later installation compared to other pubs in the area, however has maintained this use for over 100 years. This is particularly important from a social context and the use of the public house as a meeting place which highlights . The public house lies in close proximity to the course of the Offa's Dyke and further archival interest may be gathered by further research to the archaeological potential as well as communal value and historic association to important people or events which may have taken place in the public house. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 053
Address: 11 Market Street, Tamworth, B79 7LU
Description: Mid 19 th Century, Georgian, 2 bays wide, 3 storeys red brick. 2/2 sash windows with moulded and painted architraves. Cornice hoods and console brackets at first floor level. Painted stone string course. Console brackets to eaves. Tiled roof with one brick chimneystack. Late 20 th Century shop front.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building design is not particularly rare in Tamworth however the building remains as a good quality example of mid 19 th Century construction.
Aesthetic interest		The building does have a strong contribution to the historic street scene in a prominent position overlooking the Town Hall
Completeness		The building is relatively complete and maintains much of its original fabric. Although the shopfront is later, it is sympathetic to the existing building.
Group value		The building has high group value as is an example of a Georgian building overlooking the Market Square, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		The site may have archaeological interest due to the age of the building as well as its proximity to the castle.
Archival interest		Further research into the role of the building would be beneficial in understanding the development of Tamworth during the 19 th Century.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		Due to the building's position overlooking the Market Square and Town Hall and its own decoration, the building has status and presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value		The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building has good historic detailing and lies in a prominent position along the main shopping street of Tamworth overlooking the Market Square and Town Hall. The building is of a scale which has presence within the street scene and provides a strong contribution to the historic street scene.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 054
Address: 12-13 Market Street, Tamworth, B79 7LU
Description: Mid-late 18 th century, two storey stuccoed brick building, originally two buildings. Four bays wide, 6/6 sashes to 1 st floor, pitched roof fronting Market Square with 2 dormer windows with hipped rooves. Two recessed doors, late 20 th Century shop front.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building design is quite early construction and relatively rare in Tamworth, with many buildings being re-fronted during the 19 th and 20 th Centuries
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building does have a strong contribution to the historic street scene in a prominent position overlooking the Town Hall and Market Square
Completeness	Yellow	The building is relatively complete and maintains much of its original fabric. Although the shopfront is later, and the building has been opened out to form one building, it retains much of its historic detailing
Group value	Red	The building has high group value as is an example of an Georgian building overlooking the Market Square, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site may have archaeological interest due to the age of the building as well as its proximity to the castle.
Archival interest	Yellow	Further research into the role of the building would be beneficial in understanding the development of Tamworth during the 19th Century.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the building to important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	Due to the building's position overlooking the Market Square and Town Hall and its design and appearance, the building has status and presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building has good historic detailing and is an early building which lies in a prominent position along the main shopping street of Tamworth overlooking the Market Square and Town Hall. The building is of a scale which has presence within the street scene and provides a strong contribution to the historic street scene.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 055
Address: 31 Market Street, Tamworth, B79 7LR
Description: Mid 19th Century façade, core potentially earlier, 3-storey red brick, 3 bays wide off-centre with access door to right with segmented brick arch and moulded keystone. 3/3 sash windows in plain reveal at first and second floor level with painted stone cornice hoods and cornice brackets. One blue brick chimneystack in slate roof. Two 20th Century timber shopfronts with recessed entrances.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is quite an early example of construction in Tamworth which sits beside the castle walls and follows the medieval layout of the street. Many of the buildings along this street are 17 th and 18 th Century and have been re-fronted in the 19 th Century
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building as a result of its height, scale and detailing has a prominence within the street scene and conveys the historic pattern and street scene.
Completeness	Yellow	The building retains much of its historic detailing and character, with later shopfronts sympathetic to the overall style and design of the building.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value for its contribution to the historic street scene along with other buildings within the street.
Archaeological interest	Red	The rear boundary of the property is lined by the castle walls so there is high archaeological interest in this site which some remnants of buildings and construction may still be evident.
Archival interest	Red	The building has high archival value in its ability to trace how people lived in medieval Tamworth and its development.
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building due to its size and design does have a presence and landmark status within the historic character of this street scene
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of the very early medieval developments next to the castle which formed one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. The building therefore may have medieval origins and has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building, although re-fronted in the mid-19 th Century may have remnants of earlier construction and archaeological potential to the medieval village, in which the road still aligns with. The building itself is of a prominent building with good architectural details which contributed to the character and appearance of the historic street scene.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 056
Address: 35 Market Street, Tamworth, B79 7LR
Description: Mid 19th Century façade, core potentially earlier, 3-storey red brick, 3 bays wide. 1st and 2nd floors have windows with keystones to shouldered architraves, those to 1st floor with scrolls, and 2/2 sashes. Stone string course at sill levels. Console brackets to eaves. Two blue brick chimneystacks in slate roof. Two late 20th Century shop fronts.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Retail

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is quite an early example of construction in Tamworth which sits beside the castle walls and follows the medieval layout of the street. Many of the buildings along this street are 17th and 18th Century and have been re-fronted in the 19th Century
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building as a result of its height, scale and detailing has a prominence within the street scene and conveys the historic pattern and street scene and also continue the similar construction of the listed building next door.
Completeness	Yellow	The building retains much of its historic detailing and character, with later shopfronts sympathetic to the overall style and design of the building.
Group value	Red	The building has high group value for its contribution to the historic street scene along with other buildings within the street and particularly the listed building next door which shares the same design features.
Archaeological interest	Red	The rear boundary of the property is lined by the castle walls so there is high archaeological interest in this site which some remnants of buildings and construction may still be evident.
Archival interest	Red	The building has high archival value in its ability to trace how people lived in medieval Tamworth and its development.
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building due to its size and design and similar design characteristics to the neighbouring listed building does have a presence and landmark status within the historic character of this street scene
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building is part of the very early medieval developments next to the castle which formed one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. The building therefore may have medieval origins and has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building, which appears to have been re-fronted in the mid-19 th Century may have remnants of earlier construction and archaeological potential to the medieval village, in which the road still aligns with. The building itself is of a prominent building with good architectural details which contributed to the character and appearance of the historic street scene.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation: ✓

Reference: 057
Address: 36-38 Market Street, Tamworth, B79 7LR
Description: Late 19 th century facade, potentially earlier core, 3-storey red brick, 5 bays wide with two protruding bays to right and a wing left, string coursing across 5 bays between 1 st and 2 nd floor. Right component has gable roof and timber carved barge boards in mock Tudor style with 1960s shopfront, indented slightly to centre. Left wing 3 bays wide 2/2 sash windows with moulded stone sills at second floor level either side of a central canted oriel window. Late 20 th Century shopfront.
Original/Current Use Residential/ Retail
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is quite an early example of construction in Tamworth which sits beside the castle walls and follows the medieval layout of the street. Many of the buildings along this street are 17th and 18th Century and have been re-fronted in the 19th Century
Aesthetic interest		The building is quite wide at 5 bays and appears to have been constructed as 7 (with the right hand side now part of the Castle Hotel). As a result of its height, scale and detailing has a prominence within the street scene and conveys the historic pattern and street scene.
Completeness		The building retains much of its historic detailing and character, although there are maintenance issues with the string coursing and cills decaying. The later shopfronts sympathetic to the overall style and design of the building.
Group value		The building has high group value for its contribution to the historic street scene along with other buildings within the street scene.
Archaeological interest		The rear boundary of the property is lined by the castle walls so there is high archaeological interest in this site which some remnants of buildings and construction may still be evident.
Archival interest		The building has high archival value in its ability to trace how people lived in medieval Tamworth and its development.
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building due to its size and design does have a presence and landmark status within the historic character of this street scene
Social and communal value		The building is part of the very early medieval developments next to the castle which formed one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth. The building therefore may have medieval origins and has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building, which appears to have been re-fronted in the late-19 th Century may have remnants of earlier construction and archaeological potential to the medieval village, in which the road still aligns with. The building itself is of a prominent building which stretches 5 bays with good architectural details which contributed to the character and appearance of the historic street scene. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 059
Address: Offa House, Orchard Street, Tamworth, B79 7RE
Description: 1907, Edwardian/ Arts and Craft influenced building built for the Co-operative Society. Imposing, tall, three storey plus attic red brick façade with copious stone dressings and two coped gables to the street and early 20 th century shop fronts, later two storey side wing with flat roof and similar detailing.
Original/Current Use: Cooperative Building/ Public House, club

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is one of the collection of buildings associated with the Co-operative and displays quite ornate facades which although not unique, represent good examples for Tamworth.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The co-op building lies as a result of its scale and design contains good styling and detailing, and demonstrates the type of designs which were prevalent in the co-operative society
Completeness	Yellow	The co-op building has had later shopfronts installed, however is still relatively complete and contains much of its original detailing.
Group value	Yellow	Although the building is detached from the historic street scene, the building has group value with the many cooperative buildings across Tamworth as one of the 22 corporate branches of the society.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest	Yellow	There will be some archival interest in the site given that it is owned by the Co-op who have a close relationship with the development of Tamworth
Historical Association	Red	The building has strong historic associations with the Co-operative Society, with Tamworth being one of the 22 approved branches of the Co-operative network.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building due to its size and design does have a presence and landmark status
Social and communal value	Red	The building is strongly associated with the co-operative movement, which began in 1844 as a model aimed at distributing profits amongst its members and helping those most disadvantaged in society.
Conclusion: The building is part of the Co-operative group which has special interest with Tamworth being part of the 22 branch groups of the Co-operative Society. Each of the Co-op buildings such as this one have a presence in the street scene and are of good quality detailing and design. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 060
Address: 10 Silver Street, Tamworth, B79 7NH
Description: Mid 19 th Century, 3 bays wide, 3-storey red brick, pitched roof with chimney stack to right. 2 nd bay blind openings, 1 st and 3 rd bay 1/1 sash windows with plain stone sills. Early 21 st Century shop front.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Restaurant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is typical of Victorian design and is not particularly unique or rare within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The building lies on a prominent corner position at one of the main intersections of Tamworth and acts as a gateway building to the historic street pattern and street scene. The building itself is well detailed, however the shopfront is detrimental to its appearance
Completeness		The building has been altered internally, and is partially complete externally with timber windows, however has a later shopfront which is unsympathetic to the design of the building.
Group value		The building has group value with Church Street and Silver Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest		There is some interest in the development of the street, as well as the subdivision of the current site to what we see today
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building is close to the corner of a main junction, and has a presence and perhaps greater presence within the street scene with a more appropriate shopfront
Social and communal value		The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building does have remnants of original design and is in a very high profile location. The design exhibits some presence which could be improved. It is recommended that this building be retained on the Local List.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Page 108

Reference: 061
Address: 11 Silver Street, Tamworth, B79 7NH
Description: Late 19 th century, 3-storey red brick building 2 bays wide with pitched slate roof with large central chimney stack to right. 4 sash windows all with splayed stone lintels, the top 2 having plain stone sills and Glazing bars. Moulded wooden eaves, 21 st Century shop front.
Original/Current Use: Dwelling/ Restaurant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is typical of Victorian design and is not particularly unique or rare within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The building is part of the historic street scene adjacent this corner in a prominent position at one of the main intersections of Tamworth and acts as a gateway building to the historic street pattern and street scene. The building itself is well detailed, however the shopfront is detrimental to its appearance
Completeness		The building retains an original internal staircase to the front of the unit, but has been altered internally, and is partially complete externally with timber windows, however has a later shopfront which is unsympathetic to the design of the building.
Group value		The building has group value with Silver Street and Church Street and its contribution to the historic street scene which is one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth.
Archaeological interest		There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest		There is some interest in the development of the street, as well as the current and existing tenants of the building
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with any people or events.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building is close to the corner of a main junction, and has a presence and perhaps greater presence within the street scene with a more appropriate shopfront
Social and communal value		The building is part of one of the main shopping streets of Tamworth and therefore has a contribution to the development of retail shops with the people and families who worked there and visited the building
Conclusion: The building does have remnants of original design and assists in the historic street scene in this high profile location. The design exhibits some presence which could be improved. It is recommended that this building be retained on the Local List.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Page 103

Reference: 062
Address: 12 Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JN
Description: Late 19 th century, 2-storey red brick, hipped slate roof with corbelled eaves, 3 chimney stacks; 2 bay windows at ground floor level with large central doorway, incorporating an arch, keystone, and fanlight. 3 windows at first floor level with plain stone sills and stone lintels with keystones.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Surgery

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is not particularly rare within Tamworth, however is a good example of larger gentleman's villa development along Albert Road
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building is quite grand in stature and design as one of the larger gentleman's residences on the edge of Tamworth.
Completeness	Yellow	The car parking to the rear and extensions are unsympathetic to the appearance of the building, however much of the external details such as windows and doors are sympathetic.
Group value	Red	There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site may contain archaeological interest due to its proximity from the line of Offa's Dyke.
Archival interest	Yellow	There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being just outside Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and medieval town defence as well as the development of Tamworth
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Light Green	The building is one of the larger dwellings along the street and has some presence.
Social and communal value	Light Green	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.

Conclusion: Although no longer used for residential development, the remnants of the building in terms of its design and stature are of significance. The building helps tell the story of the development of Tamworth with large Gentleman's villas on the outskirts of the town which also has group value along with the other Gentleman's villas constructed along this street.

Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--------	-----------------	---

Reference: 063
Address: 11-11a Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JN
Description: Early - mid 19 th Century, much altered 2-storey brick built house painted white, tiled roof with additions, 2 large chimney stacks, plain stone sills and lintels to windows, large brick workshop to rear now separate residential dwelling.
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	This building is particularly interesting with the addition of a rear wing which appears to have been a workshop which illustrates the domestication of industry within Tamworth. The building is also a good example of larger gentleman's villa development along Albert Road
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building is relatively modest compared to other properties along this section of road, however does represent a positive influence upon the historic street scene.
Completeness	Yellow	The rear garden has been taken by the adjoining residence for car parking, however the front dwelling and rear workshop are sympathetic in their detailing
Group value	Red	There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The site may contain archaeological interest due to its proximity from the line of Offa's Dyke.
Archival interest	Yellow	There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being just outside Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and subsequent medieval town defences as well as the development of Tamworth
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building forms part of the historic character of the street scene, however does not have a large landmark status.
Social and communal value	Green	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.
Conclusion: The building is significant in that it forms part of the historic street scene which in this area contains many of the larger Gentleman's villas. The workshop to the rear is also interesting and externally the building is relatively intact with sympathetic detailing. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 064
Address: 26 Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JS
Description: Late 19 th century, 2-storeys, 3 bays wide brick with stucco façade, blue brick plinth, slate hipped roof with 4 cut chimney stacks. 2 bay windows at ground floor with central doorway with wooden pilasters and corbelled canopy, plain stone sills and carved lintels with ornate stone supports. Front boundary wall blue brick with stone copings, remaining boundary walls red brick with stone copings, two storey outbuilding attached to side contemporary with dwelling.
Original/Current Use: Residential (used as a Council registry office during 20 th Century)
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building is not particularly rare within Tamworth, however is a good example of larger gentleman's villa development along Albert Road
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building is quite grand in stature which is accentuated by its setback from the road and brick boundary walls. The building is designed as one of the larger gentleman's residences on the edge of Tamworth.
Completeness	Green	A number of works have altered the once formal gardens, with part of the front wall removed, UPVC windows installed and the building appears to be suffering from lack of maintenance. Brick outbuildings to rear are an interesting feature.
Group value	Red	There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings.
Archaeological interest	Green	The site may contain archaeological interest due to its proximity from the line of Offa's Dyke.
Archival interest	Yellow	There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being nearby Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and subsequent medieval town defences as well as the development of Tamworth. There may also be interest in the tenants of the building, particularly when it was used by the Council as a registry office in the 20 th Century.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association with important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building is one of the larger dwellings along the street and has some presence.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre. There is also communal and social value with the site being a former registry office and for which will feature amongst the collective memory of the local community who used these services.
Conclusion: The building represents part of the development of Tamworth with large Gentleman's villas on the outskirts of the town which also has group value along with the other Gentleman's villas constructed along this street. This particular example is grander with large setbacks from the street and boundary wall which accentuate the building's position. The association with the building being a former registry office is also of significance. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 065
Address: 43/43a Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JS
Description: Mid-Late 19 th Century, 3 storey red brick to right 3 bays wide, 1 st bay has 3 storey canted bay window, 3 rd bay 2 storey canted bay window, other windows have carved stone surround; pitched roof, large chimney stack to right. Left building is later 19 th Century 2 storeys, 2 bays wide, red brick, hipped slate roof with 1 chimney to the right, arched doorway to left with keystone and fanlight. Two storey bay window to right; carved stone surround to windows.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Offices

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building design, scale and ornamentation is a good example of larger gentleman's villa development along Albert Road.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building is quite grand in stature and ornamentation in design which is accentuated by its height and massing within the street. The building is designed as one of the larger gentleman's residences on the edge of Tamworth.
Completeness	Yellow	The building is relatively complete and maintains much of its historic detailing.
Group value	Red	There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings.
Archaeological interest	Green	The site may contain archaeological interest due to its proximity from the line of Offa's Dyke.
Archival interest	Green	There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being nearby Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and subsequent medieval town defences as well as the development of Tamworth. There may also be interest in the tenants of the building.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building is one of the larger dwellings along the street and has some street presence.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.
Conclusion: The building represents part of the development of Tamworth with large Gentleman's villas on the outskirts of the town which also has group value along with the other Gentleman's villas constructed along this street. This particular example is grander as a result of its height, design and ornamentation which accentuates the building's position. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 066
Address: The Albert, Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JS
Description: Late 19 th century, 2-storey end terrace. Red brick with blue brick plinth, 3 bays wide. pitched roof with 2 brick chimneys, one shared, Central door with timber surround. Plain stone sills and lintels to openings
Original/Current Use: Hotel, Public House/ Restaurant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The design of the building is typical of Victorian construction, however the use as a hotel is one of two buildings which such a use along this stretch of Albert Road.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building has aesthetic interest in forming part of the historic street scene which comprised some of the larger gentleman's residences on the edge of Tamworth.
Completeness	Yellow	The former outbuildings have been removed and the historic wall to the side has been increased in height, although details are still visible. The external façade contains much of its original historic fabric and alterations are sympathetic.
Group value	Red	There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings. There is also group value in the association of the building as a hotel across from the railway station and Tweeddale Arms opposite which also was a former hotel.
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to contain archaeological significance.
Archival interest	Yellow	There may also be interest in the use of the site for a hotel during the 19 th Century and any particular tenants of the building.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association with important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building is the first historic building on one side of Albert Road when coming from the Station so has some presence in the historic street scene.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre. The building is also important for its role as a meeting place within the community.
Conclusion: The building played a significant role in the development of this area of Tamworth by providing hotel accommodation, given its close proximity to the train station. Later use as a public house is also important for the development of the area and further research may uncover its relationship to important people or events in its use as a meeting place. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation: ✓

Reference: 067
Address: 54 & 54a Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JN
Description: Late 19 th century, Purpose built corner shop now chemist. Two storey red brick with blue brick plinth; canted corner façade. Retains late 19 th century shop front. Although other windows have been replaced with uPVC frames, the building has stone sill bands and string coursing, lintels, round-arched hood mould and frame for signage on the corner.
Original/Current Use: Retail

Criteria	Significance	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is relatively unique in that it represents purpose built retail unit and still maintains an early shopfront for Tamworth.
Aesthetic interest		The building lies on a corner location and is a good example of an early purpose-built retail unit along Albert Road.
Completeness		The building maintains much of its historic fabric, unfortunately the early shopfront has transfers on the glass which is unsympathetic to the historic detailing.
Group value		There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings.
Archaeological interest		The site lies on the course of Offa's Dyke so Archaeological potential is very likely.
Archival interest		There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being built upon Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and subsequent medieval town defences as well as the development of Tamworth. There may also be interest in the tenants of the building.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building lies on a prominent corner and along with the dual facing aspect and historic shopfront to the corner maintain street presence.
Social and communal value		The site represents a period of building and retail development in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre.
Conclusion: The building is located in a prominent position and was a purpose-built retail development of a corner shop amongst the building of larger dwellings along Albert Road. The building maintains much of its historic detailing and has an early shopfront. It is recommended that this building be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 068
Address: 57-62 Albert Road, Tamworth, B79 7JN
Description: Early 20 th Century, two storey brick terrace, virtually unaltered with small gables with applied timber framing supported on carved brackets. Edwardian glazing bar sashes and casements, ground floor square bay windows and mostly original doors with fanlights in stone-dressed architraves. Original brick outhouses to rear.
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Residential, Office

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The terrace is quite unique for Tamworth being a more high status terrace which maintains much of its historic features and detailing.
Aesthetic interest		The buildings which make up the terrace have had minimal alteration to the individual sites with original residential proportions maintained despite some buildings being turned into offices. The buildings also maintain outbuildings to the rear which are of interest.
Completeness		Much of the original fabric is intact, some historic walls to the front have been removed and some UPVC windows appear to the rear of the properties. Stone footpaths through alleyways to outbuildings beyond also remain.
Group value		Much of the group value lies within the terrace which was constructed as a speculative build and lies relatively in its original form. There is also group value in the contribution the terrace plays as a later extension of Albert Road.
Archaeological interest		The site lies on the course of Offa's Dyke so Archaeological potential is very likely.
Archival interest		There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being built upon Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and subsequent medieval town defences as well as the development of Tamworth. There may also be interest in the tenants of the buildings.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The terrace lies at the beginning of Albert Road and acts as a gateway to the historic street scene made up of larger properties.
Social and communal value		The terrace represents a later period of building along Albert Road and continues the rather ornate detailing and proportions of dwellings found along Albert Road.
Conclusion: The speculative terrace, although constructed later than many of the buildings along Albert Road, is designed in a way which carries on the attributes of larger dwellings with a presence in the street scene. The terrace is relatively unique as it has had minimal change and maintains much of its architectural and historic detailing and outbuildings. It is recommended that this building be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 069
Address: 64 Albert Road (3-storey structure to corner of Lower Gungate), Tamworth, B79 7JN
Description: Early 20 th Century corner landmark building, three storeys, hipped roof, red brick. Ground floor late 20 th Century shopfront, above on corner is a full height projecting domed hexagonal tower with multi-aspect windows separated by fish scale tile hangings. Two storey canted bay in the centre of the Lower Gungate elevation, flanked by pilasters.
Original/Current Use: Car Showroom/ Restaurant

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Red	The building is relatively unique within Tamworth given the use of the building as a car showroom, which is most likely one of the first, and certainly only remaining early example of such a building within Tamworth. The design and scale for this corner site location at a prominent gateway location within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building has a strong contribution to the street scene at this prominent junction which is a gateway into Tamworth Town.
Completeness	Yellow	The building has later shopfronts and signage which could be improved, however the building is relatively intact with timber windows and historic details intact. The clutter and size of the traffic junction does have some harm to the building's setting.
Group value	Yellow	The building is slightly isolated, having lost its context to the rear with a car parking area, however to the side is a motor repair shop which links back to the previous use. This assists in setting the gateway entrance to the historic environment towards both Aldergate and Albert Road
Archaeological interest	Red	The site lies on the course of Offa's Dyke so Archaeological potential is very likely.
Archival interest	Red	There would be archival interest in the site which goes back to the medieval Tamworth with the site being built upon Offa's Dyke, a Saxon and subsequent medieval town defences as well as the development of Tamworth. There would also be interest in the introduction of the private motor vehicle during the early 20 th Century Tamworth.
Historical Association	Yellow	The building has association with the introduction and sale of motor vehicles to Tamworth.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Red	The building with its corner tower has a significant presence within the street scene and acts as a gateway building at this prominent intersection.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building has a dominant presence at this intersection and will be strongly associated with this intersection in the collective minds of the local community and visitors to Tamworth. The use of a car showroom at the introduction of accessible vehicular transport is also of interest.

Conclusion: The building is designed purposely to have a landmark presence over the large intersection and acts as a gateway building on entry to Tamworth and the historic environment. The building is relatively intact in its historic detailing and has a positive presence within the street scene and is important as it remains as the last showroom which marks the occasion when vehicle ownership was arriving in Tamworth. It is recommended that this building be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	-----	-----------------	---

Reference: 070
Address: The Tweeddale Arms and associated outbuildings, Tamworth, B79 7HU
Description: Early – mid 19 th Century. Landmark two storey building, red brick, blue brick plinth facing railway station. 3 bays wide with central doorway with projecting portico on Doric columns. Traditional paving is in front of the Tweeddale Arms, where there are stone cobbles and two cast-iron rings set into stone by the entrance to the beer cellar. Original attached and detached brick outbuildings.
Original/Current Use: Hotel, Public House/ Hot food takeaway

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Although high status Georgian buildings are not particularly rare in Tamworth, this site is relatively unique as a result of the good quality design of the main building with projecting portico and also the retention of historic outbuildings to the rear.
Aesthetic interest		The building lies at a prominent junction across from the train station and is an example of an early hotel with detached and attached outbuildings which adds to the aesthetic interest
Completeness		The building and outbuildings are relatively complete with timber windows and historic details maintain, however is lacking in maintenance. Some of the interest is harmed by the large traffic island and clutter caused by traffic control measures
Group value		There is group value in this building along with other villas built along Albert Road which create a road with high status buildings. There is also group value in the association of the building as a hotel across from the railway station and The Albert opposite which also was a former hotel.
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to contain archaeological significance.
Archival interest		There may also be interest in the use of the site for a hotel during the 19 th Century and any particular tenants of the building.
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building is the first historic building on one side of Albert Road when coming from the Station so has some presence in the historic street scene.
Social and communal value		The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre. The building is also important for its role as a meeting place within the community.
Conclusion: The building typifies the development of Tamworth during the early 19 th Century with large Gentleman's villas and the need for Hotels and public houses for visitors to Tamworth. The site has kept much of its historic buildings and is relatively rare in this respect. It is recommended that this building be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 071
Address: Victoria Mews, Victoria Road, Tamworth, B79 7HR
Description: 1877, 2-storey red brick former Wesleyan Chapel now flats. Red brick, pitched and gable roof with parapet and large projecting pediment fronting Victoria Road. Arched windows, three string courses, two central doors with circular fanlights above, 8 remembrance stones to plinth.
Original/Current Use: Wesleyan Chapel/ Residential apartments

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building style is not particularly unique, however does represent the introduction of non-conformist religion to Tamworth at the turn of the 20th Century which saw a number of chapels built around the outskirts of the town.
Aesthetic interest		The building represents good quality design and construction, constructed on a prominent corner location with one of the earlier examples in Tamworth of a more basilica type church design from the traditional crucifix designs of CoE churches.
Completeness		Although externally still seen as a church, internally the subdivision of spaces for apartments has removed internal fabric and layout.
Group value		There is group value to the historic Victorian street scene along this section of Victoria Road.
Archaeological interest		The site lies on the course of Offa's Tamworth Dyke, an Anglo-Saxon fortification which was constructed to protect Tamworth from hostile attackers in the 8th-10th centuries.
Archival interest		The site has high archival interest in its ability to tell the story of the Wesleyan religion arriving in Tamworth. There is also medieval interest with the site being along the course of the Offa's Dyke
Historical Association		There is historic association with the development of the Wesleyan religion in Tamworth, as well as the association with the development of non-conformist chapels within Tamworth.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have some presence in the street scene at this prominent junction
Social and communal value		The church has high value within the community for those who have worshipped, been married, or lost family and friends. As a meeting place the site is important to the collective memories of people and groups which have utilised the building.

Conclusion: The building is important as it demonstrates the increasing favour in which non-conformist religions were having at the time and their development within Tamworth. Although the building is not particularly unique, it is well constructed and does have street presence as well as group value and also has archaeological interest being located along the course of the Offa's Dyke. It is recommended that the building be retained on the Local List
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 072
Address: 13 & 15 Victoria Road, Tamworth, B79 7HS
Description: Early 20 th Century, 2 storey red brick semi-detached dwellings, red brick with blue brick plinth, hipped rooves with 2 large forward projecting gables, ends with mock Tudor gable infill, stone lintels and cills, large porches with timber brackets. Red brick boundary wall to side and rear with stone copings
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	Although not unique as a general building style, the pair of semi-detached dwellings are quite prominent pair of dwellings in this particular street scene which contains more modern development and smaller terraced properties.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The buildings are quite large in scale and which appear to have been constructed in a Gentleman's villa style, but with Edwardian and moving towards arts and crafts detailing, a positive aspect to the historic street scene.
Completeness	Yellow	The buildings retain much of their historic detailing and features, as well as the boundary wall which has unfortunately been removed to the front, along with the garden which has been hard surfaced for car parking
Group value	Red	The building along with 17 is a good group of larger Edwardian dwellings which contribute well to the historic street scene
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest in the site
Archival interest	Green	The building would assist in telling the storey of the development of Tamworth during the early 20 th Century
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any historic association of the buildings to a particular person or event
Designed landscape interest	Black	n/a
Landmark status	Green	The buildings as a result of their scale and design do have presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value	Yellow	There is some communal and social value as the intactness of the buildings shows how people during the early 20 th Century lived and the changing fashions which contributed to the development of the residential areas of Tamworth.
Conclusion: The buildings are good quality examples of Edwardian buildings which adopted a larger gentleman's villa type dwelling with new influences such as arts and crafts styling. The buildings maintain much of their historic detailing and contribute strongly to the historic street scene. It is recommended that the building be retained on the Local List.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation: ✓

Reference: 073
Address: 17 Victoria Road, Tamworth, B79 7HS
Description: Early 20 th Century, 2 storeys detached, red brick with blue brick plinth, full height canted bay window with stone surrounds ending in hexagonal roof to front, Hipped roof with smaller gable with mock Tudor infill, small oriel window to the side
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	Although not unique as a general building style, the building is quite prominent on this corner location with the building displaying design and massing similar to a gentleman's villa like on Albert Street.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building is quite large in scale and which appears to have been constructed in a Gentleman's villa style, but with Edwardian and moving towards arts and crafts detailing, with oriel windows and mock timber boarding which has a positive aspect to the historic street scene.
Completeness	Yellow	The building retains much of their historic detailing and features, as well as the boundary wall which has unfortunately been removed to the front, along with the garden which has been hard surfaced for car parking and an unsympathetic extension to the rear
Group value	Red	The building along with 13-15 is a good group of larger Edwardian dwellings which contribute well to the historic street scene
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest in the site
Archival interest	Green	The building would assist in telling the storey of the development of Tamworth during the early 20 th Century
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any historic association of the buildings to a particular person or event
Designed landscape interest	Black	n/a
Landmark status	Yellow	The building as a result of its scale and design does have presence within the street scene at this corner location
Social and communal value	Yellow	There is some communal and social value as the intactness of the buildings shows how people during the early 20 th Century lived and the changing fashions which contributed to the development of the residential areas of Tamworth.
Conclusion: The building is of a good quality example of an Edwardian buildings which adopted a larger gentleman's villa type dwelling with new influences such as arts and crafts styling. The buildings maintain much of their historic detailing and contribute strongly to the historic street scene. It is recommended that the building be retained on the Local List
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 074
Address: 21-31 Victoria Road, Tamworth, B79 7HU
Description: Mid to late 19 th Century, Domestic terrace of 7 properties, No.19 later extended to front so excluded from local listing. Symmetrical row of terraces, each terrace 2 bays wide, 2 storeys, brick with slate roof and chimney, 21 and 31 have stucco facades, all with original doorways, centrally located with wooden pilasters, wooden canopy and wooden support. All with 2 windows at ground floor level, 1 on either side of door and 2 first floor level. No.s 21 and 25 with timber windows, remainder have unsympathetic UPVC
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The row of terraces represents a quite early speculative development of terraces during the mid-19 th Century.
Aesthetic interest	Red	The buildings have a symmetrical appearance which adds to their interest
Completeness	Yellow	The terrace still maintains much of its symmetry, with some front boundaries intact and fenestration intact, however has some unsympathetic alterations such as UPVC windows and doors, and hardstanding front gardens for parking is detrimental.
Group value	Red	There is group value in that the terrace represents a phase of residential development with each of the dwellings having the same design characteristics.
Archaeological interest	Blue	There is limited archaeological interest
Archival interest	Green	There will be some archival interest in the relationship of the dwellings to the early speculative development of residential areas in Tamworth.
Historical Association	Blue	The terrace does not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape Interest	Black	n/a
Landmark status	Black	N/a
Social and communal value	Green	There is some communal and social value as the intactness of the buildings shows how people during the 19 th Century lived.
Conclusion: The group of buildings which make up the terrace represent an early speculative development of terraced housing as the residential areas of Tamworth developed from the train station and Albert Road. Unfortunately many of the front gardens have become cluttered with hard standing and the parking of vehicles.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 075
Address: 42 Victoria Road, Tamworth, B79 7GY
Description: Mid to late 19 th Century, 3-storey, 3 bays wide, brick with render. Slate hipped roof with 4 chimney stacks, 2 canted bay windows on ground floor, central doorway with rectangular fanlight. 2/2 sash windows on upper floors with plain stone sills and channelled stone lintels.
Original/Current Use: Hotel/residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The design of the building is typical of Victorian construction, however the use as a hotel is one of a handful of buildings in this area for such a use along this stretch of Victoria Road which cater for travellers coming from the train station as well as the former cattle market which was once behind the site.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building has aesthetic interest in forming part of the historic street scene which comprised some of the larger gentleman's residences on the edge of Tamworth.
Completeness	Green	The building has been converted and has further new development to the side and rear. The external façade contains much of its original historic fabric and alterations are sympathetic.
Group value	Red	There is group value in this building along with other hotels and villas built along Albert Road and Victoria Road which create a road with high status buildings. There is also group value in the association of the building as a hotel from the railway station and surrounding hotels such as the Tweeddale Arms and Albert Hotel
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to contain archaeological significance.
Archival interest	Yellow	There may also be interest in the use of the site for a hotel during the 19 th Century and any particular tenants of the building as well as its relationship to visitors of the site of the former cattle market behind.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the site with important people or events
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building due to its massing and height has some presence in the historic street scene.
Social and communal value	Yellow	The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of Gentleman's townhouses which has created an identity of such buildings in this area of the town centre. The building is also important for its role as a meeting place within the community.
Conclusion: The building typifies the development of Tamworth during the early 19 th Century with large Gentleman's villas and the need for Hotels and public houses for visitors to Tamworth. Although much altered with development to the rear, the building is considered to represent a positive aspect to the street scene. It is recommended that this building be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:

Reference: 076
Address: Globe Public House, Watling Street, Wilnecote, B77 5BA
Description: Late 19 th century former two dwellings, now public house. Constructed of red brick with blue brick plinth, pitched roof with concrete roof tiles, 4 bays wide, doors to either side with 8/4 timber sash above, central advertisement
Original/Current Use: Residential/ Public House

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Although typical of 19 th Century building, the use is quite unique in that this building was a 'beer house' when a law was introduced to give restricted licence to encourage more beer drinking and less spirits, in which some beer licences operated from residential dwellings such as this where beer was brewed on site.
Aesthetic interest		The building represents the remaining component of the historic street scene on this side of Watling Street with the remaining buildings lost as a result of the construction of the school behind.
Completeness		The building is relatively complete with much of the historic detailing still intact.
Group value		Although much of the historic context adjacent to the site is lost, it still assists in illustrating the historic street scene with buildings opposite.
Archaeological interest		As the building is situated next to the Roman Road, there may be some archaeological interest
Archival interest		There would be high archival interest in telling the story of the role of the beer house in Tamworth.
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have some street presence given that it is the only building on this side of the street
Social and communal value		The building has been a beer house and public house for 100 years and will be important to the community as a meeting place and which figures in the collective memories of people who have gathered here.
Conclusion: The building is relatively unique in Tamworth, commencing as a dwelling which turned into a beer house and then into a fully licenced Public House. Public Houses are important in that they act as a meeting place for the community as well as being the last remnants of the historic street scene on this side of the Roman Road.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 077
Address: Congregational Chapel, Glascote Lane, Wilnecote, B77 2PH
Description: 1892 Congregational Chapel, constructed of brick with ashlar stucco, date stamp to gable end fronting street. 3 larger lancet windows to centre with 2 smaller lancet windows either side of gabled porch. Extended in 1930s with single storey side wing Single storey wing to side.
Original/Current Use: Place of Worship

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building style is not particularly unique or ornate, however does represent the introduction of non-conformist religion which was occurring over the UK during the later 19 th Century and early 20 th Century. This is the last remaining example of a non-conformist chapel in Wilnecote.
Aesthetic interest		Although quite a simple and plain design, the building represents good quality construction, with one of the earlier examples in Tamworth of a more basilica type church design from the traditional crucifix designs of CoE churches.
Completeness		The church is relatively complete with alterations being sympathetic to the architectural integrity of the building
Group value		There is group value to the collection of churches with the CoE church opposite and nearby Sunday schools which contribute to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		The site has limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		The site has good archival interest in its ability to tell the story of the Congregational Protestant religion arriving in Wilnecote.
Historical Association		There is historic association with the development of Congregational Protestant religion in Wilnecote
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have some presence in the street scene opposite the Holy Trinity Church
Social and communal value		The church has high value within the community for those who have worshipped, been married, or lost family and friends. As a meeting place the site is important to the collective memories of people and groups which have utilised the building.
Conclusion: The building is important as it demonstrates the increasing favour in which non-conformist religions were having at the time and their development within Wilnecote. Although the building is not particularly unique, it is well constructed and does have street presence as well as group value representing a handful of non-conformist churches built in Wilnecote, or which this is the only to remain with the Wesleyan chapel now demolished. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:

Reference: 078
Address: Holy Trinity Sunday School, Watling Street, Wilnecote, B77 1HN
Description: 1894, 3 bays wide to street, 5 bays wide to side façade, gable to the street, red brick with blue brick sill band and plinth and pitched clay tile roof. All windows round arched and door with elaborate decorative stone window heads. Original multi-paned windows, each containing a row of stained glass panes with a row of frosted panes above. Front façade has bullseye window with date stone above and below a gabled porch with decorative cornice. A roundel above the keystone contains a sculpted wreathed female head.
Original/Current Use: Sunday School

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	The building type is not particularly rare, however the Sunday school has been affiliated and has been a Sunday school for the Church of the Holy Trinity since its construction to today which is relatively unique.
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building has a plain design typical of its function, however has some good quality detailing around fenestration and brickwork.
Completeness	Yellow	The building maintains much of its historic fabric and is relatively in tact
Group value	Red	The building has strong association and group value with the Holy Trinity Church, a grade II listed building, as well as other places of worship in the near vicinity
Archaeological interest	Yellow	The building fronts Watling Street, a Roman Road, so there may be archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest	Yellow	There would be archival interest in the building and the relationship with the church which the use of the building is still maintained to today.
Historical Association	Blue	The building does not appear to be associated with any important events or people.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building has some presence within the street scene
Social and communal value	Yellow	The building performs the role of a Sunday school and meeting place amongst the community and has served this role for over 100 years. As such there would be strong social and communal value in the relationship of the building and the collective memories of the people and their families who have used the facility.

Conclusion: Although of simple design, the building has good detailing and is rather unique, having been in use as a Sunday school for over 100 years. The building has a strong relationship and group value with the Holy Trinity Church, a Grade II listed building which is located nearby. It is recommended that the site be retained on the local list.

Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--------	-----------------	---

Reference: 079
Address: Wilnecote Hall, Watling Street, Wilnecote, B77 5BP
Description: Early – mid 19 th Century, Georgian 3-storey red brick, 3 bays wide, hipped roof with 2 large chimney stacks. Late unsympathetic windows, plain stone sills to windows on ground floor and second floor, string course at first floor level, timber doorcase with rectangular fanlight.
Original/Current Use: Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is relatively rare in Wilnecote being a large gentleman's villa which once had larger grounds.
Aesthetic interest		The building is a good example of a large country house and illustrates the development of Wilnecote during the early 19 th Century.
Completeness		Much of the grounds have been built upon as well as unsympathetic details such as UPVC windows installed
Group value		Much of the historic street scene in this particular location has been eroded by new housing development however the building does contribute strongly to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		The building fronts Watling Street, a Roman Road, so there may be archaeological interest in the site.
Archival interest		Further research may uncover links and relationships to important local people of Tamworth, with very limited information about the occupiers of the building.
Historical Association		The building was originally the home of Major T.B. Bamford who once owned a large amount of land in Wilnecote. His daughter married Robert Hanbury of Bole Hall and their son Robert W Hanbury, a prominent and well-known MP
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building is set back from the street, however does have a presence within the street scene
Social and communal value		The site represents a period of building in Tamworth which is associated with the construction of large country houses with associated grounds which would have employed people from the local area.
Conclusion: The building is one of the few larger country houses constructed in Wilnecote and although much of its grounds have been built upon, the building exhibits a presence within the street scene at this prominent location along Watling Street, a Roman Road.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 080
Address: St. John's Roman Catholic Church, St. John's Street, Tamworth, B79 7EX
Description: Rebuilt 1930's potentially 19 th Century Core, Brick with hipped slate roof, dentilled eaves, tall thin round arched windows in groups of three, 8 bays wide to St John's Street, and 2 bays to Orchard Street and set back. Stuccoed on part of its southern elevation, which part also has full-height pilasters and one set of 3 tall windows. There is a tall statue niche in the west end of its lower height north range and blue brick wall with railings.
Original/Current Use: Place of worship
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/Uniqueness	Red	The building itself is rather unique with many of the churches in Tamworth town being from the 19 th Century and more Victorian/Edwardian in style. This church adopts a modernist approach which is quite unique
Aesthetic interest	Red	The building is an interesting modernist design which has almost brutalist inspiration with very strong horizontal definition with very slender windows.
Completeness	Yellow	The building is relatively complete and maintains much of its historic fabric.
Group value	Red	The church sits within a precinct of other churches nearby along Aldergate as well as contributing to the appearance of the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Yellow	There may be further archaeological interest in the historic core of the building with this being the 2 nd known Roman Catholic church on the site.
Archival interest	Red	The building is the second construction of a church building on the site, which will assist in telling the story of the prominence of the Roman Catholic religion in Tamworth amongst the daily lives with a larger church being needed.
Historical Association	Blue	There does not appear to be any association of the building with important events or people.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Yellow	Although located to the rear of Aldergate along a side road, the building does have presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value	Red	The church has high value within the community for those who have worshipped, been married, or lost family and friends. As a meeting place the site is important to the collective memories of people and groups which have utilised the building.
Conclusion: The building presents a quite modernist design and is the second construction of a church on the site. The building has a strong relationship to the rise of the Roman Catholic religion of Tamworth and has group value with the amount of non-conformist churches located nearby along Aldergate. It is recommended that the site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Red	Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 081
Address: 17&19 Watling Street, Wilnecote, B77 5BN
Description: 1833, Pair of semi-detached cottages, 2-storey darker red brick than surrounding. Pitched roof with forward projecting gable ends with hipped roof, central lean to porch. No.19 maintains original iron casement windows, No.17 later 20 th Century bow windows to ground floor. Central chimneystack. Later boundary wall, with apparent historic coping stones on piers.
Original/Current Use: Residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The buildings are relatively rare being one of the first buildings along this section of Watling Street.
Aesthetic interest		The buildings are of interesting early design which has a positive impact upon the street scene and utilises traditional materials and is of a darker coloured brick which is also interesting within this context.
Completeness		No.19 is more complete than No.17 which has lost its original iron windows and has had a bow window added to the ground floor front facade.
Group value		The buildings contribute strongly to the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest		As the buildings are situated along the Roman Road and are quite early, there may be some archaeological interest
Archival interest		The buildings will have some archival significance as they will be strong related with the development of this section of Wilnecote and its location alongside the roman road
Historical Association		The buildings do not appear to be associated with important events or people
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The buildings do have presence within the street scene
Social and communal value		The building has a strong association with the development of Wilnecote, being one of the first buildings
Conclusion: The building is one of the first buildings along this section of Watling street and stands out from the adjoining speculative development of the late 19 th – early 20 th Century. One of the buildings maintains much of its historic details, which is significant in this context.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 082
Address: Warwick House, 178 Watling Street, Wilnecote, B77 5BJ
Description: Late 19 th century, Blue brick 2 storeys, originally 3 bays wide, later gable ended extension fronting street. Tiled roof with white painted stone dressings around sash windows timber sash windows. Early 20 th century shop front to gable end. Historic front wall to side.
Original/Current Use: dwelling to the brick and Tile works/ Shop, workshop

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The style of dwelling is not very unique in the local context, however the use of blue engineering brick for the construction of the dwelling is quite rare in the local area.
Aesthetic interest		The building is unusual with its blue brick façade, and most likely different in order to exhibit the goods from the Brickyard. The building is in a prominent location along Watling Street and contributes strongly to the historic street scene.
Completeness		Although an unsympathetic roller shutter has been installed, the majority of the building retains much of its historic fabric
Group value		The building has group value with the buildings opposite in conveying the historic street scene of Wilnecote.
Archaeological interest		The building is located along the Roman Road, which may render archaeological significance, as well as remnants of the tile and brick works such as foundations of kilns etc to the rear may also be discoverable.
Archival interest		The buildings will have some archival significance as they will be strong related with the development of this section of Wilnecote and the tile and brick works and its location alongside the Roman Road
Historical Association		The buildings do not appear to be associated with important events or people
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building is the first on the approach from the round-a-bout and has a prominence within the street scene which is assisted by its blue brick façade
Social and communal value		The building has a strong association with the development of Wilnecote, being associated with the development of industry with the tile and brick works which would have employed many local people.
Conclusion: The building was formerly to the front of the brick and tile works, which may be the reason for the construction in quite contrasting blue brick. The building has had some unsympathetic alterations such as a roller shutter, however does maintain much of its historic fabric and is quite prominent in the street scene and sets a positive element to the historic roman road.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:

Reference: 083
Address: Site of former workhouse, later St Editha's Hospital, Kensington Road, Tamworth, B79 8RD
Description: Early 20 th Century, 3-storey with dormers, red brick with blue brick plinth, pitched roof with central lantern. Central component is 7 bays wide with 5 bay wing with hipped rooves ending in square tower at either side. 6 dormer windows, ornate stone eaves and 2 string course and stone quoins. Large central doorway with stone pilasters breaking eaves ending with finials in front of large triangular gable. Converted to flats
Original/Current Use: Hospital/ Residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is situated on the site of a former workhouse (1859) and is the last link to the institutional use of this site. The hospital building itself is also quite rare within Tamworth.
Aesthetic interest		The building has a very ornate design and a presence within the area as a result of its size, scale and design
Completeness		Much of the context of the building has been lost, as well as the windows being replaced by unsympathetic UPVC.
Group value		Much of the context of the building has been lost
Archaeological interest		Although none of the workhouse remains, this component of the building was constructed when the site was turned into a hospital.
Archival interest		There will be archival interest in the role of the workhouse and hospital in the development of Tamworth and the social conditions experienced by the residents.
Historical Association		William Macgregor, a well-known philanthropist during the Victorian period donated money for the building of this component of the building when the workhouse was converted into a hospital.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building still retains some landmark status, although now as the centre of a housing development.
Social and communal value		The uses as a workhouse and hospital have strong links to the development of Tamworth and its social structure and operation. Although none of the buildings relating to the workhouse no longer exist, the hospital building is a key linkage to this part of Tamworth's history
Conclusion: The building and site are important for Tamworth as they represent an important component of Tamworth's social history. The building itself is well designed and quite prominent, despite having lost some of its historic detailing and its relationship with the surrounding context. It is recommended that this building be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 084
Address: Top Lock Cottage, Glasgote Canal, B77 2AN
Description: 1790, formerly one cottage fronting the canal, extended to right to form two dwellings. Three bays wide with small toll house attached to side. Original cottage has plain cills with curved brick headers, later canted bay window to ground floor and a chimney stack at either end. Boundaries have 18 th /19 th Century Wall with triangular copings, which appear to be later additions than original stone copings, some of which are still in situ.
Original/Current Use: Lock keeper's cottage/ Residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		One of only two lock-keeper's cottages in Tamworth so is relatively rare within Tamworth, as well as the toll booth which is also retained.
Aesthetic interest		The building, through its design and appearance presents a very positive aspect to the canal side environment
Completeness		The building retains much of its historic fabric and detailing
Group value		The building contributes strongly to the historic canal-side environment and its associated infrastructure
Archaeological interest		Given its position next to the canal since the 18 th Century, there may be potential archaeological interest
Archival interest		The building would be interesting for further archival research into the role of the canal for Tamworth
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has some presence within the canal side environment which marks the location of the lock
Social and communal value		The building has social and communal value in the functioning of the lock and relationship to the canal side environment from the days of hauling cargo and paying to use the lock to the more passive space the canal environment has today.
Conclusion: The building is an early building for Tamworth which is strongly associated with the construction and development of the canal network. The dwelling is one of only two such lock keepers cottages in Tamworth and contributes strongly to the historic canal side environment.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 085
Address: Bottom Lock Cottage, Glascote Canal, B77 2FF
Description: 1790, Three bays wide, later extension of third bay. Brick façade with clay tile pitched roof, timber windows in plain reveals. Extension has taller ridge and chimney to right. Late 18 th , early 19 th Century boundary wall with curved copings.
Original/Current Use: Lock keeper's cottage/ Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		One of only two lock-keeper's cottages in Tamworth so is relatively rare within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The building, through its design and appearance presents a very positive aspect to the canal side environment
Completeness		The building retains much of its historic fabric and detailing
Group value		The building contributes strongly to the historic canal-side environment and its associated infrastructure
Archaeological interest		Given its position next to the canal since the 18th Century, there may be potential archaeological interest
Archival interest		The building would be interesting for further archival research into the role of the canal for Tamworth
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building has some presence within the canal side environment which marks the location of the lock
Social and communal value		The building has social and communal value in the functioning of the lock and relationship to the canal side environment from the days of hauling cargo and paying to use the lock to the more passive space the canal environment has today.
Conclusion: The building is an early building for Tamworth which is strongly associated with the construction and development of the canal network. The dwelling is one of only two such lock keepers cottages in Tamworth and contributes strongly to the historic canal side environment. It is recommended that the dwelling be retained on the local list
Overall Significance:		Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

Reference: 086
Address: 3-9 Dog Lane, Amington, B77 4AH
Description: Late 19th century terrace, 2-storeys, rendered brick. Modern casement windows in original openings at first floor, enlarged openings at ground floor. Two small brick chimneystacks adjacent to ridgeline. One small chimneystack to No.9. Tiled roof.
Original/Current Use: Residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The buildings have the form a terrace of workers cottages, potentially with the canal and are not particularly rare or unique within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		Much of the historic detailing has been eroded by unsympathetic materials such as UPVC, ridge tiles and the rendering of the cottages which gives the cottages a much more modern appearance.
Completeness		Although maintaining their general form, the cottages have lost much of their historic fabric and detailing
Group value		The buildings do form part of the historic environment in this area, but appear detached due to their more modern appearance.
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest		There may be some archival interest in the relationship of the buildings with the nearby canal
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any relationship to important events of people
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The site is located to the rear of properties, and although part of the canalside environment, the presence is limited.
Social and communal value		There may be some social and communal value with the relationship of the cottages to the canal environment
Conclusion: The terrace of late 19 th Century cottages has been altered so substantially that they now appear to be of a much more modern date. Minimal historic fabric remains, and also situated near the canal, their appearance has been changed substantially that the linkage to this environment is quite fragmented. It is recommended that the buildings be removed from the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	X

Reference: 087
Address: 107 Fazeley Road, B78 3LW
Description: Early 19th Century, painted brick with pitched and gable tiled roof. Three storeys, three bays wide, with two storey single bay side extension projecting forward of the main dwelling and single storey late 20 th Century extension to front of dwelling. Main building has 8/8 sashes to ground and first floor, with second floor with 4/8 sash windows. All windows with segmented headed arch with plain cill. Painted brick modillioned eaves.
Original/Current Use: Residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building is a former farmhouse and although not unique in its construction, relatively few examples in Tamworth remain
Aesthetic interest		The building retains much of its appearance, albeit a number of outbuildings has been demolished. The building does however have a positive aspect within the street scene
Completeness		The building is relatively complete, although its grounds and land has been reduced with dwellings either side. The building however maintains much of its historic detailing.
Group value		Much of the context of the building has been removed, however there is some linkage with the historic street scene with the row of terraces nearby
Archaeological interest		There would be limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		There may be some archival interest and relationship to the farming practices on the outskirts of Tamworth
Historical Association		The building does not appear to be associated with important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have some prominence within the street scene as a result of its scale and massing
Social and communal value		The building has some significance in that it relates to the farming nature of the area and the building is representative of this period in local history.
Conclusion: Although much of the land and context of this farmhouse has been removed, the scale and massing of the building has a presence within the street scene. The building represents the historic farming which was present in the outskirts of Tamworth and is one of the few remaining examples. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 088
Address: 320 Main Road, Glascote, B77 2AX
Description: Mid 19th Century, detached 2-storey brick cottage with pitched and gable roof, with later single storey side extension with flat roof. Red brick with blue brick plinth, modern UPVC glazing, chimneys removed.
Original/Current Use: Residential, Police Station/ Residential

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building style is not particularly rare or unique within Tamworth
Aesthetic interest		The poor use of materials and loss of historic fabric such as the chimneys harms the way that the building is experienced.
Completeness		Much of the historic detailing has been removed, with loss of chimneys and unsympathetic UPVC installed and surrounded by hard surfacing which affect how the building is experienced
Group value		The building does form part of the historic street scene, but the loss of historic detailing makes the building look more modern than historic
Archaeological interest		There is unlikely to be archaeological interest in the site
Archival interest		Given the previous use as a police station, there may be some archival interest in the site
Historical Association		There does not appear to be any association with important people or events.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		Although on a corner location, much of the historic interest and presence has been eroded
Social and communal value		There may be some social and communal value through the use of the building as a police station and the development of the surrounding area
Conclusion: Although a building of traditional construction, much of the historic significance has been eroded by loss of historic detailing and poor use of materials in alterations and hard standing. The building now looks more modern in appearance and has a reduced prominence within the street scene. It is recommended that the site is removed from the Local List
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:
		X

Reference: 089
Address: United Methodist Church, Neville Street, B77 2BA
Description: 1877, Large chapel in brick with first 4 bays and front façade in stuccoed ashlar. Modern UPVC round headed windows with painted stone sills, moulded keystones to side with pilasters between bays. and imposts set within recessed panels. Brick dentilled eaves. Central doorway with fanlight. Slate roof.
Original/Current Use: Place of worship
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The building style is not particularly unique or ornate, however does represent the introduction of non-conformist religion which was occurring over the UK during the later 19 th Century and early 20 th Century. This is the last remaining example of a non-conformist chapel in Glasgote.
Aesthetic interest		Although quite a simple and plain design, the building represents good quality construction, with one of the earlier examples in Tamworth of a more basilica type church design from the traditional crucifix designs of CoE churches.
Completeness		The church has had unsympathetic UPVC window replacements,, with the remainder of the church relatively intact
Group value		There is group value to the historic street scene with the church sited at the end of a terrace of late 19 th Century dwellings.
Archaeological interest		The site has limited archaeological interest
Archival interest		The site has high archival interest in its ability to tell the story of the Methodist religion arriving in Glasgote.
Historical Association		There is historic association with the development of Methodist religion in Wilnecote
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The building does have some presence in the historic street scene
Social and communal value		The church has high value within the community for those who have worshipped, been married, or lost family and friends. As a meeting place the site is important to the collective memories of people and groups which have utilised the building.
Conclusion: The building is important as it demonstrates the increasing favour in which non-conformist religions were having at the time and their development within Glasgote. Although the building is not particularly unique, it is well constructed and does have street presence as well as group value representing a handful of non-conformist churches built in Glasgote. It is recommended that this site be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 090
Address: 2-20 New Street, B77 3EF
Description: 1850, Well-designed terrace of early Victoria cottages, 2 storeys, blue and red brick in Flemish bond with each dwelling with a triangular gable, except centre house which is a larger gable. All fenestration modern UPVC with majority brick finish, No.20 has painted façade.
Original/Current Use: Residential
Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The group of terraced properties are unique in that they represent an early group of terraces which are more ornate in detail to those of the later 19 th Century.
Aesthetic interest		The buildings are all uniform in appearance and present a positive aspect to the historic street scene
Completeness		Unfortunately all windows have been replaced with UPVC which is unsympathetic, and one of the dwellings has a painted façade, however much of the remaining historic fabric is still intact
Group value		There is group value in the terrace in its own right, as well as the contribution to the historic street scene which these buildings form a key component of.
Archaeological interest		There is limited archaeological interest.
Archival interest		There may be some interest in the existing tenants and the purpose of the development of this particular group of dwellings.
Historical Association		The buildings do not appear to be associated with any important people or events
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		The group of buildings does have presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value		The buildings form an early group of buildings in this area of Glascote and there is value in the contribution the buildings have to the development of the local area.
Conclusion: The buildings represent quite an early phase of speculative housing development and are important for their contribution for the development of Glascote. The terraces are more ornate than traditional construction later in the century and therefore have a presence within the street scene. It is recommended that these buildings be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓

Reference: 091
Address: Wilnecote Board School and Infant School, New Road, Wilnecote
Description: Opened in 1878, designed by Basil Champneys, and constructed by Messrs. Watsons and Sons. Comprises of a Board School to the west and an infant school to the east in Queen Anne Style. Both buildings constructed of brick with plain tiled roof. Board school, originally E-Plan but later extensions to form H-Plan. Central hipped roof with bellcote with side wings with gabled ends and venetian windows and dormers to each wing. Fenestration is later 20 th Century UPVC. Infant school is gabled to the front with venetian window and later additions to north, pitched and gabled roof. Some original windows in situ, some later 20 th Century UPVC.
Original/Current Use: Board and Infant School/ Offices

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	Yellow	Board Schools are not rare, and its general form, although of good quality is not particularly unique
Aesthetic interest	Yellow	The building is well designed in a Queen Anne Style, however later extensions and alterations do detract from the building's interest.
Completeness	Yellow	The building is relatively complete, some timber windows remain, however many of the windows have been replaced with unsympathetic UPVC and rear extensions to the board school are not of the quality as the front of the building.
Group value	Red	There is some group value in that this site has a board and infant school, and the headmasters house (now detached) located nearby.
Archaeological interest	Blue	The site is unlikely to have archaeological value
Archival interest	Yellow	The site would benefit from further research as to important people and events associated with the site.
Historical Association	Red	The building is attributed to a design by the office of Basil Champneys, as well as important people who attended the school such as important footballer Harry Hibbs.
Designed landscape interest	Black	N/a
Landmark status	Green	The building when constructed would have stood more prominently, however is encased by housing, the building does however maintain some presence
Social and communal value	Red	The building has high social and communal value for those who attended the school and for which is features in their collective memories.
Conclusion: Although the building has had a number of unsympathetic alterations to it, the building has good design elements and retains linkages to the group of buildings which also includes the headmasters house, which is now detached. The building has attributions to the office of Basil Champneys as one of his office's earlier works, as well as being associated with important people who have come from Wilnecote. It is recommended that the building be retained on the local list.
Overall Significance:	Yellow	Recommendation: <input checked="" type="checkbox"/>

LOCAL LIST ASSESSMENT – POTENTIAL NEW ADDITION

Reference: 092

Address: Bolehall Manor Club, Amington Road, Tamworth. B77 3LH

Description: Mid-late 19th Century, possibly earlier core, Large country house and grounds, now club. Red Brick with stepped gable and large chimney stacks. Stone mullion windows with large canted bays to side gable and front façade. Originally 2 bays wide, early 20th Century expanded with two storey wider bay to side, two storey extension to rear and canted bay to side. 'WM' motifs to side gable. Stone Wall to Amington Road

Original/Current Use: Residential/ Members Club

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Bole Hall Manor is relatively rare in the Borough being one of a few larger country houses and grounds constructed which has not been subdivided or grounds constructed upon. The particular design is also quite unique within the borough alongside the stone wall which is still intact.
Aesthetic interest		The building is well designed, however some of the later extensions and alterations do detract from the building's interest.
Completeness		Externally the building is relatively complete, however has had a number of extensions, some more sympathetic than others. The grounds still being largely intact with the exception of the large car parking area. Internally a number of walls have been removed losing much of its historic floorplan.
Group value		There is some group value to the historic street scene with Bolehall House and Bole Hall and the nearby terrace housing in between which reflect the historic street.
Archaeological interest		There is unlikely to be archaeological interest in the subject site.
Archival interest		There is archival interest in the building which was home to William MacGregor who once housed his collection of Egyptology artefacts in this building and opened the house as a museum of his collection, many of which now lie in national museums.
Historical Association		The building is associated with William MacGregor a local philanthropist who lived here. Macgregor undertook many activities to aid the poor and founded the first Hospital of Tamworth, and was asked to help found the Tamworth Co-op Society and became treasurer in 1886. Macgregor also created the first free library in Tamworth, and was associated with the construction of churches at Glascoate and Hopwas.
Designed landscape interest		There is some designed landscape interest with the relationship of the grounds surrounding the house, and which the building has been positioned to overlook these grounds which contribute to its significance.
Landmark status		The building due to its design and setting amongst landscaped grounds has presence and landmark status within the street scene.

Social and communal value		The building has strong communal and social value in that it is associated with William Macgregor and the use as a small museum to display the collection of artefacts. More recently the club as a venue for gatherings will also have significance in the collective memories of the community who have visited the building.
Conclusion: The building and grounds are important to the historic development of Tamworth and particularly its relationship to William Macgregor, known as one of the largest benefactors of Tamworth. The building itself is well designed and is strongly associated with its grounds, and although there have been some unsympathetic alterations, the building maintains much of its street presence and character. It is recommended that this site be added to the Local List.
Overall Significance		Recommendation:	✓

DRAFT

LOCAL LIST ASSESSMENT - POTENTIAL NEW ADDITION

Reference: 093
 Address: Coventry Canal Walls, Glasgote
 Description: Early 19th Century two sections of canal wall, Red brick with triangular brick coping. 2 walls 3 stretchers with 1 header, remaining wall rebuilt English bond.
 Original/Current Use: Canal walls

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		The walls are relatively unique, and appear to be part of the last remaining sections of original wall
Aesthetic interest		The walls are important for their aesthetic value given that they line the canal and are part of the last remaining fragments which are key to the canal side environment. The triangular coping stones are interesting given that many coping stones on the canal – such as the listed bridges are curved.
Completeness		One wall appears to have been rebuilt, however the remaining walls are intact
Group value		The walls contribute to the setting of the canal which includes two locks, keepers cottages, wharf and listed canal bridge.
Archaeological interest		There may be some archaeological value in the walls and their construction and association with the canal.
Archival interest		The walls their construction techniques and materials have some archival interest in the story of canal construction.
Historical Association		The canal is associated with renowned British canal engineers James Brindley, and Thomas Sheaby, the later of which was born in Tamworth.
Designed landscape interest		N/a
Landmark status		N/a
Social and communal value		N/a

Conclusion: The canal side walls are the last few remnants of walls left along this section of the Coventry Canal, much of which has been removed as a result of housing development. The walls are original and are interesting in their construction technique with bespoke bonding and triangular coping which is unusual. The construction of the canal also has association with renowned canal engineers, with the canal, locks and many of the bridges in this section being associated with Thomas Sheaby, many of which are listed buildings. It is recommended that the three sections of wall be added to the local list.

Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--	-----------------	---

Page 136

LOCAL LIST ASSESSMENT- POTENTIAL NEW ADDITION

Reference: 094

Address: Pretty Pigs Public House, Shuttington Road, Alvecote. B79 0ED

Description: 1828. Main 3 storey component 4 bays wide pitched roof with forward projecting gable with 'CER 1828' mounted to the centre, multi-paned timber top-hung casements. One and a half storey range to side, 5 bays wide with malting floor in attic, 5 top hung casements, some windows partly blocked. Internally much altered, large iron fireplace range.

Original/Current Use: Maltings/ Public House

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness		Extant maltings are quite rare within Tamworth, with the public house use also dating from the 19 th Century. Although the maltings use is no longer undertaken, the building still retains the public house use.
Aesthetic interest		The building has good aesthetic interest with very minimal alteration, except for the painting of the building. The building is quite prominent next to the River Anker, the relationship with the river being evident in its positioning. The malting floor grills on the side return are still evident, as is the large fireplace internally
Completeness		The building is relatively complete with much of the historic detailing intact. Internally the historic floorplan has been lost, however elements such as the fireplace remain.
Group value		N/a
Archaeological interest		The site is unlikely to have archaeological interest
Archival interest		The site could further the knowledge of early brewing history in Tamworth and the relationship with the River behind. There is also interest in past ownerships with the Charles Edward Reppington of Amington Hall building this building as the Reppington Arms.
Historical Association		The building is associated with the Reppington Family of Amington Hall, who funded the construction of a school and church for Amington. The buildings was constructed as Reppington Arms and was used to hold inquests into the deaths of miners from the nearby mines. Locally renowned spotted pigs were also kept on this site which may have influenced the current name of "Pretty Pigs."
Designed landscape interest		n/a
Landmark status		The building as a result of its scale and design does have prominence from both the River Anker and the street scene.
Social and communal value		The site and the building also have strong links as a meeting place for over 100 years which has high social and communal value.

Conclusion: The building is quite well designed and retains much of its historic features with the building still showing evidence that it once was a maltings. The building is still retained as a public house use, and although internally the building has been altered, remnants are still evident. The building is also important for being a meeting place for the local community and for its association with the Reppington Family and its linkages with the mining industry and the keeping of spotted pigs.

Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓
-----------------------	--	-----------------	---

DRAFT

LOCAL LIST ASSESSMENT- POTENTIAL NEW ADDITION

Reference: 096

Address: Bole Hall, Amington Road, Tamworth. B77 3PA

Large grounds and recreational reserve, formerly the grounds to Bole Hall House. Historic brick Wall along Amington Road with pedestrian entrance, as well as stone gate piers to the vehicular entrance. Overgrown woodland and adjacent Macgregor Park which was previously part of the larger Bole Hall Estate. Dwelling is Mid 19th Century house, now flats, heavily modified. Red brick, three storeys, 3 bays wide with hipped roof. 20th Century UPVC windows and dormers to roof, 3 bay extension to rear. Single storey curved wings to each side façade, large entry door case with fanlight and timber door.

Original/Current Use: Residential/ Apartments

Criteria	Heritage Value	Comments
Rarity/ Uniqueness	High	There are relatively few examples of this type of large country house and grounds in the borough. Wilnecote Hall is a similar and better example in terms of the dwelling which has not been as modified as this example, however the significant grounds at Bole Hall are still intact (unlike Wilnecote Hall) with long historic boundary wall and parkland which are significant to the estate. Given the similarities of Wilnecote Hall and Bole Hall, it is interesting that these two buildings were connected through the mother of Richard W Hanbury, resident of Bole Hall; who was the daughter of Major T. B. Bamford, of Wilnecote Hall.
Aesthetic interest	High	The large boundary wall which runs along Amington Road is still intact and adds to the well vegetated setting of Bole Hall estate with informal and formal areas, some of which are accessible to the public such as Macgregor Park which add a large deal of aesthetic interest to the local area. The building itself has a presence, however alterations and extensions have altered much of the building's aesthetic interest.
Completeness	Low	The building has been substantially altered internally and externally along with ancillary outbuildings, with poor historic detailing and large extension to the rear with large side dormer windows which detract from its significance. The grounds are still relatively intact, if not overgrown, however the existing planting scheme and grounds can still be appreciated and experienced today.
Group value	High	There is group value with Bolehall Manor opposite and Bolehall Manor club and terraces nearby which given some sense of the historic street scene.
Archaeological interest	Medium	There may be some interest in the grounds of the site given that in the grounds surrounding were formal gardens relating to the buildings use as a country house.

Archival interest		There would be further local interest gained by the study of the relationship of the building to Wilnecote Hall and whether they were designed by the same architect. Also there is archival interest in the former resident Robert W. Hanbury.
Historical Association		The building is associated with Robert W Hanbury, who was an MP and was the Financial Secretary to the Treasury and also President of the Board of Agriculture.
Designed landscape interest		The positioning of the estate is quite important with the dwelling overlooking the large grounds which contained the formal landscaped area of the Bole Hall. Although evidence has not uncovered whether any renowned landscape architects were involved with the designing of the formal gardens, the gardens and historic wall have a great deal of local significance.
Landmark status		The building does have some presence within the street scene.
Social and communal value		The building reflects a time when large country houses were constructed, particularly along this section of Amington Road which has a number of large dwellings.
Conclusion: Although the dwelling has been much altered, the formal gardens and boundary walls including the stone entrance piers still retain a sense of the historic estate which was owned by MP Robert W. Hanbury. It is considered that the estate as a whole has sufficient local interest and should be added to the Local List.
Overall Significance:		Recommendation:	✓